The Weight Of A Wing:

Synthesis of Subsonic Airplane Design E. Torenbeek, 2013-06-29 Since the education of aeronautical engineers at Delft University of Technology started in 1940 under the inspiring leadership of Professor H J van der Maas much emphasis has been placed on the design of aircraft as part of the student's curriculum. Not only is aircraft design an optional subject for thesis work but every aeronautical student has to carry out a preliminary airplane design in the course of his study. The main purpose of this preliminary design work is to enable the student to synthesize the knowledge obtained separately in courses on aerodynamics, aircraft performances, stability and control, aircraft structures, etc. The student's exercises in preliminary design have been directed through the years by a number of staff members of the Department of Aerospace Engineering in Delft. The author of this book, Mr E Torenbeek, has made a large contribution to this part of the study programme for many years. Not only has he acquired vast experience in teaching airplane design at university level but he has also been deeply involved in design-oriented research, e.g. developing rational design methods and systematizing design information. I am very pleased that this wealth of experience, methods and data is now presented in this book.

Multidisciplinary Design Analysis and Optimization of Aerospace Composites Charles Lu, 2019-04-30

Multidisciplinary Design and Optimization of Aerospace Composite Materials is a collection of ten SAE technical papers focusing on the design analysis of aerospace composite structures from the perspective of various disciplines. The book concentrates on the following aspects: Analytical methods for weight design of aircraft structures including a parametric geometry model capable of generating dedicated models for both aerodynamic and structural solvers; Methodologies for evaluating the structural performance of carbon epoxy composite panels; An aerodynamic design of flexible wings made of composite structures; Thermal design and analysis of composite enclosures; Methodologies for analyzing the acoustic performance of composite structures including the design optimization method to evaluate the acoustic performance in terms of transmission loss (TL) of various composite panels; The lightning effect on composites presenting a theoretical method to compute the electrical current propagating through composite structures due to lightning strikes; The issue of fire resistance as most polymer resins are flammable once the respective ignition temperatures are reached; A probabilistic based reliability analysis of the composite structures. The method is demonstrated on a graphite epoxy composite space habitat subjected to the debris attacks; A sustainability analysis of aircraft composite materials including improved durability, less maintenance and lower energy consumption.

The Air Propeller, Its Strength and Correct Shape H. Dietsius, 1923 Airplanes and airships at the present day often have engine installations totalling several hundred horsepower the output from which must be transformed into thrust through the medium of one or more propellers so that not infrequently a single propeller must transmit 250 to 500 HP The peripheral speed of the propeller blades in such cases often exceeds 200 meters 656 feet per second and the load due to centrifugal force may then amount to several tons It is extremely desirable therefore that the strength of propellers should be calculated and not determined entirely by the workmen who are employed in their manufacture Flight ,1923
