It's the common mentality that baking doesn't need to be a complicated endeavor. In the heart of the kitchen, a symbol of joyful celebration, it's all about the fun of sharing wonderful treats made with love with the people we care for. And who's to say that my favorite reward to me is the love and support from readers and the little hints and tips about the fact that many people straight up give up on making vegan cakes and cupcakes without any special ingredients and a few tricks to impress whoever sees them. You don't need to be a professional baker with all the recipes that require a lot of time and effort. Don't worry about burning the kitchen while icing the long rolls or getting it all falling apart on top of the little nut mixtures that require a lot of spreading. A simple 9-inch 23cm pan will work for the round ones, though the whole will turn out delicious regardless of what diameter they are. The muffin tins will last for a long time, and the first batch is always better than the second. But give them time to develop their flavor. You probably have far more time for the baked goods than you realize. The French bread and baguettes are nearly always vegan, and you'll find a lot of bread recipes everywhere. Your local bakery probably has a few vegan items, with no particular effort taken to make them. And every whole food market sells vegan baked desserts like cupcakes alongside their non-vegan baked offerings. Most whole food markets also carry vegan products from a local bakery. If you're lucky, you may even have a local doughnut house that's partly a local vegan bakery. There are a few shops around the world.
