Posthumanism and the Digital University Lesley Gourlay, 2020-12-10 It is a commonplace in educational policy and theory to claim that digital technology has transformed the university the nature of learning and even the essence of what it means to be a scholar or a student However these claims have not always been based on strong research evidence What are students and scholars actually doing in the day to day life of the digital university This book examines in detail how the world of the digital interacts with texts artefacts devices and humans in the contemporary university setting Weaving together perspectives from a range of thinkers and disciplinary sources Lesley Gourlay draws on ideas from posthuman and new materialist theory in particular to open up our understanding about how digital knowledge practices operate She proposes that digital engagement in the university should not be regarded as virtual or disembodied but instead may be understood as a complex set of entanglements of the body texts and material artefacts making a case that agency and the ways in which knowledge emerges should be regarded as more than human SILTA, 2016 Bahasa ibu: Pelestarian dan pesona bahasanya Muh. Abdul Khak, 2014 On preservation of native languages in Indonesia collection of articles Ratthasātsān, 2017 Transnational Research in English Language Teaching Rashi Jain, Bedrettin Yazan, Suresh Canagarajah, 2022 The edited volume contributes to the comprehensive and inclusive understanding of the global ELT landscape in instructional settings within and across countries. It brings together language teachers, educators and researchers who use their experiences of shuttling across borders to reflect on the shaping of their pedagogical and research practices. Transnational Identities Practices Eng Yazan JAIN, 2021-07-31 The self-inquiries in this edited volume exemplify the dynamism that permeates global ELT wherein English language educators and teacher educators are increasingly operating across blurred national boundaries creating new liminal spaces charting new trajectories crafting new practices and pedagogies constructing new identities and reconceptualizing ELT contexts. This book captures the diverse voices of emerging and established ELT practitioners and scholars originally from and/or operating in non-Western contexts spanning not only the so-called non-Western peripheries but also peripheries created within the center when certain members are minoritized on the basis of their race, language and/or place of origin. The chapters address a range of related issues occurring at the intersections of personal and professional identities, pedagogy and classroom interactions as well as research and professional practices in liminal transnational spaces.

Cosmopolitan English and Transliteration Xiaoye You, 2016-08-31 This book argues for a broad cosmopolitan perspective that emphasizes local as well as global forms of citizenship and identification and sees human connectedness as being deeply underpinned by various accents, styles and uses of language in everyday practices. The Sovereignty of Global Englishes: Translingual Practices and Postnational Imaginaries Jerry Won Lee, 2014 Ideologies of monolingualism sustain three interrelated and seemingly fundamental assumptions about language: 1 native speaker usage is authentic and thus ideal; 2 a person's birthplace correlates with proficiency; and 3 the plurality of languages and varieties results in incomprehensibility. Although the persistence of monolingualism is a central concern for this dissertation rather than merely dismissing or resisting the logics of monolingualism, this dissertation explores how the practices of English in global contexts characterized by the movement of people and language resources and the constitution of postnational imaginaries provides new ways of thinking about the historical and contemporary persistence of monolingual normativity. Therefore, although discourses of nationalism have historically sustained the exceptionalist logics of monolingualism, emerging postnational forms of social organization and language practice invite us to see authenticity as a reconstitutable discourse, national belonging as a mobile practice and incomprehensibility as a subversive resource. Thus, this dissertation argues that the resilience of monolingualism inhibits us from seeing English language proficiency as a discursive formation rather than a measure of communicative competence. Proficiency must be reimagined as reflective of one's ability to autonomously transgress normative boundaries and communicative conventions. Drawing on a hybrid methodology that incorporates historiography metacritique of existing scholarship analyses of various artifacts including linguistic landscapes poetry and popular culture and theorization of classroom practice this dissertation insists that as an increasing number of people around the world use English as it becomes a global resource increasingly dissociated with any single national imaginary we are positioned to reconsider what it means to be a proficient user of English In short to be proficient at English is to be a sovereign user of English not only able to use English correctly but able to use English incorrectly without being pathologized for doing so
