The Voices Of Men The Shaping Of Masculinities In Three Subcultural Contexts:

The Voices of Men: The Shaping of Masculinities in Three Subcultural Contexts Thomas Matta, 2001-10-18 Have you ever wondered why 95% of the people in prisons are men Have you wondered why the great majority of school shootings were perpetrated by boys What processes are at work sociologically and psychologically that engenders boys to become men How are boys socialized to go from soft to hard in masculine definition How does this mystery of masculinity contribute to male dominance and brutality Is it possible that this process is responsible for the difficulty men have in relationships with women and their families This research explores the interplay between the internal and the social by examining the intersection of gender class and ethnicity in the masculinity shaping process This study uses life cycle and social constructivist perspectives to explore the subjective experiences of men from varied subcultural contexts A theory that has received much attention in feminist and men's studies circles is Chodorow's 1978 The Reproduction of Mothering which reconceptualizes psychoanalytic notions of personality development to more fully include the impact of the structure of parenting on that process Chodorow postulates that due to the Industrial Revolution's virtual removal of the man from the world of the family boys and girls psychological development varies greatly in their paths to gendered beings resulting in men defining and over valuing their own separateness Simply this results in men who have relational deficits and a lesser capacity for empathy and nurturance than women have With feminist object relations theory in mind this study explores the shaping of masculinities within three subcultural contexts A total of thirty in depth personal narrative interviews were conducted with men from three subcultural contexts Class was held relatively constant as the men interviewed were from urban and rural working class backgrounds The interviewees included men who were members of Amish communities as well as men from the African American working class in Pittsburgh and white working class men from Erie County Pennsylvania In listening to men's subjective experiences from varied life circumstances and subcultures embedded in a particular sociohistorical context the plurality of masculinities was informed and expanded Through the interviews with the men from these three subcultures feminist object relations theory was further informed and extended The interviews suggest that gender making definition and maintenance is a much more fluid and dynamic process than previously postulated in the feminist object relations literature The psychoanalytic concept of ego boundaries was reconceptualized utilizing a systemic framework and redefined as a process of expansion and contraction with contraction socially constructed as masculine Marginalized Masculinities Chris Haywood, Thomas Johansson, 2017-04-07 This volume explores how men in precarious positions in different countries and social contexts understand and experience their masculinities focusing on men who are viewed as being marginal in a range of fields in society including the family work the media and school It provides a range of stakeholders including students academics researchers and policy makers with an informed understanding of what it means to experience marginalization

Men and Masculinities Daniel Tillapaugh, Brian L. McGowan, 2023-07-03 There continues to be much concern about the retention and persistence of men in college particularly Black Latinx and Native American men In addition queer and trans men also have found institutions to be problematic spaces For those who do persist we know that men are overrepresented in student conduct cases and engage in risky behaviors around alcohol drug use and sexual relationships Additionally we know that college men have historically avoided engaging in help seeking behaviors for their academic and personal success This book addresses the ways that theory can be put into practice for powerful transformative learning to support college men and their development This book synthesizes the research of the past three decades on college men to inform college student educators on the developmental needs of college men and illuminates how young men are socialized prior to their arrival to campus but perhaps more importantly how the collegiate environment becomes a training ground for the socialization of masculinities by students their peers and their environments Beyond that it sets out how practitioners can help young men understand why and how they have been socialized around their gender identity but also what their gender identity and sense of masculinity means for their future selves The book highlights programs and services designed to have college men engage with and dialogue around issues of hegemonic toxic or unhealthy aspects of masculinity These promising practices can offer college men opportunities to understand their power privilege and identity in ways that can be affirming and healthier leading to more life giving chances This is all the more important in the context of an ever evolving society where traditionally held norms and expectations around gender particularly masculinities are shifting This book equips student affairs staff faculty and administrators to better support college men s development It offers readers insights ideas and models for adapting and developing programs services and initiatives that may meaningfully meet the needs of specific student populations while recognizing that there is no one size fits all approach to this work Messages Men Hear Ian M. Harris,1995 This text is based on over 10 years research with 500 men from different classes backgrounds races and ethnic groups It constructs a theory of masculinity by exploring masculine expectancies how men form their gender identities and how those identities influence their behaviour
