The Shame of Reason in Organizational Change Naud van der Ven, 2011-06-03 Rational thought according to Levinas has the merit of making the world lucid and controllable But at the same time it strips things and people of their identity and incorporates them in a homogenized rational order Illusory but nonetheless oppressive Rationality s totalitarian character can provoke resistance and grief with people who are enlisted by it This can lead to a shameful confrontation in which the thinker is being confronted with his victim s resistance and sees himself and his thinking made questionable By proceeding along this route thinking can be brought to self criticism and to revision of standpoints This description by Levinas of rational thinking shows similarity to what managers do in organizations They make their business controllable but at the same time with their planning and schemes they create a totalitarian straitjacket This similarity suggests that also the reactions to imperialistic rationality from Levinas description ought to be found in organizations Is it indeed possible to indicate there the kind of resistance and grief Levinas speaks about Does that give rise to confrontations between managers and their co workers who are supposed to subordinate to their schemes Do managers then feel shame And do those shameful confrontations consequently lead to self reflection and change Desk research suggests that the above elements are partly to be found in the literature of management theory Interviews with managers show that Levinas line of thought can also be found in its completeness within organizations At the same time it becomes clear that becoming conscious of the elements of that line of thought that rationality is all conquering that it provokes resistance that that can lead to shame as well as to a new beginning this is a difficult path to travel The related experiences are easily forgotten and sometimes difficult to excavate Translation of Levinas thinking into terms of management and organization can help us spot them where they play their role in organizations

European Educational Research (Re)Constructed Mike Zapp, Marcelo Marques, Justin J.W. Powell, 2018-11-05 This book examines contemporary educational research and its governance, addressing key questions via a multidisciplinary theoretical framework of comparative institutional analysis with original data and applying multiple methods. The authors explore and explain important changes in the governance of educational research and the contents of scholarship in education and related disciplines across Europe since the 1990s. This volume synthesizes findings from a multi-year comparative research project including in-depth empirical case studies of three distinct educational research cultures evolving in Germany, Norway, and the United Kingdom. The authors reconstruct and compare changing conceptualizations of educational research embedded in increasingly internationalized contexts of research and examine shifts in its governance, including patterns of funding, publication, and evaluation. They examine the producers of European educational research and the distinct role of the European Union in constructing a European Educational Research Area, in establishing cross-border networks, and in reshaping educational research agendas. Through innovative empirical analysis of programs of research on various levels and education researchers' collaborations in scientific networks, they provide insights into supra-national dynamics in education-related scholarship. Theory-guided content analysis of research projects funded by leading national funding agencies and by the most highly developed supranational research funding instrument, the EU Framework Programme, enables the authors to embed findings on Germany, the United Kingdom, and Norway in a broader European
