changes in translation practice and the assumptions which underpin them. Leading theorists respond to the state of Translation Studies today, particularly the epistemological dilemma between theories that are empirically oriented and those that are inspired by developments in Cultural Studies. But the volume is also practical. Experienced instructors survey existing pedagogies at translator/interpreter training programs and explore new techniques that address the technological and global challenges of the new millennium. Among the topics considered are how to use translation technology in the classroom, how to construct a syllabus for a course in audiovisual translating or in translation theory, and how to develop guidelines for a program for community interpreters or conference interpreters. The contributors all assume that translation, whether written or oral, does not occupy a neutral space. It is a cross-cultural exchange that produces far-reaching social effects. Their essays significantly advance the theoretical and practical understanding of translation along these lines.

Situated Learning in Translator and Interpreter Training Maria Gonzalez-Davies, Vanessa Enríquez Raído, 2018-10-18. Situated Learning is generally understood as a context-dependent approach to translator and interpreter training under which learners are exposed to real life and/or highly simulated collaborative work environments and tasks both inside and outside the classroom. Ultimately, Situated Learning seeks to enhance learners' capacity to think and act like professionals. This book sets out to gauge the extent to which different factors influence the implementation of Situated Learning models in various teaching and learning contexts. It presents an understanding of Situated Learning that goes beyond previous interpretations of this notion, traditionally dominated by the discussion of pedagogical practices in authentic, i.e. real world or semi-authentic professional settings. This wider remit of Situated Learning encompasses previously underrepresented contextual factors pertaining to translation traditions, historical trends, community beliefs and customs, socio-economic constraints, market conditions, institutional practices, budgetary issues, or resource availability. The pedagogical considerations of these key aspects make this book particularly useful for both novice and seasoned teachers of translation and interpreting with an interest in informed practical advice on how to implement the principles of Situated Learning in collaborative teaching and learning environments that seek to promote translators and/or interpreters' professional competence. This book was originally published as a special issue of The Interpreter and Translator Trainer.

Training 21st century translators and interpreters: At the crossroads of practice, research and pedagogy Marc Orlando, 2016-02-19. Marc Orlando looks at the gap between practice and research in Translation Interpreting Studies and at the way this gap could be bridged. He focuses on the way practice and research can inform each other in the education and training of future translators and interpreters with the aim of training future professionals both as practitioners and researchers in an educational environment that would marry both vocational and academic elements. It is proposed that promoting the status of practising researchers would help to fill the current gap between practitioners, researchers, and Translation Interpreting educators. Suggestions are made concerning ways of undertaking research and gaining new insights into Translation Interpreting.

Studies from professional practice and experience and of designing new didactic tools for education and training from experiential and theoretical knowledge Method in Translation History Anthony Pym, 2014-04-08 Starting from the critical notion that we should be asking questions of contemporary importance and that importance itself must be defined Anthony Pym sets about undoing many of the currently dominant models of translation history positing among much else that the object of this history should be translators as people that researchers are subjectively involved in their object that cultural systems are based on social will that translators work in intercultural spaces and that a model of cooperation through negotiation may be applied to the way translators and researchers work between cultures At the same time the proposed methodology is eminently constructive showing how many empirical techniques can be developed and applied clear illustrations are given of corpus selection working definitions deceptive statistics and the construction of networks and regimes incorporating elaborate examples drawn from medieval and modernist fields as well as finding space for notes on practical problems like funding research Finding its focus in historical debates this book cannot help but create contemporary debate its arguments seek not only to revitalize the historical study of translation but also to develop the wider concerns of intercultural studies
