Ways Residing Transformation Interdisciplinary Perspectives:

Ways of Residing in Transformation Sten Gromark, Mervi Ilmonen, Katrin Paadam, Eli Støa, 2017-05-15 Profound transformations in residential practices are emerging in Europe as well as throughout the urban world They can be observed in the unfolding diversity of residential architecture and spatially restructured cities The complexity of urban and societal processes behind these changes requires new research approaches in order to fully grasp the significant changes in citizens lifestyles their residential preferences capacities and future opportunities for implementing resilient residential practices The international case studies in this book examine why ways of residing have changed as well as the meaning and the significance of the social economic political cultural and symbolic contexts The volume brings together an interdisciplinary range of perspectives to reflect specifically upon the dynamic exchange between evolving ways of residing and professional practices in the fields of architecture and design planning policy making facilities management property and market In doing so it provides a resourceful basis for further inquiries seeking an understanding of ways of residing in transformation as a reflection of diversifying residential cultures This book will offer insights of interest to academics policy makers and professionals as well as students of urban studies sociology architecture housing planning business and economics engineering and facilities management

Architecture for Residential Care and Ageing Communities Sten Gromark, Björn Andersson, 2020-10-19 Architecture for Residential Care and Ageing Communities confronts urgent architectural design challenges within residential innovation ageing communities and healthcare environments The increasing and diversified demands on the housing market today call for alterability and adaptability in long term solutions for new integrated ways of residing Meanwhile an accentuated ageing society requires new residential ways of living combining dignity independence and appropriate care Concurrently profound changes in technical conditions for home healthcare require rethinking healing environments This edited collection explores the dynamics between these integrated architectural and caring developments and intends to envision reconfigured environmental design patterns that can significantly enhance new forms of welfare and ultimately an improved quality of life This book identifies presents and articulates new qualities in designs in caring processes and healing atmospheres thereby providing operational knowledge developed in close collaboration with academics actors and stakeholders in architecture design and healthcare This is an ideal read for those interested in health promotive situations of dwelling ageing and caring

Creating Built Environments Roderick Lawrence, 2020-06-14 Built environments are complex emergent systemic and require contextual analysis They should be understood before reconsidering how professionals and researchers of the built environment are educated and trained to reduce the gap between knowledge practice and real world circumstances There is an urgent need to rethink the role of policy makers researchers practitioners and laypeople in the construction renovation and reuse of the built environment in order to deal with numerous environmental ecological economic financial and social ethical challenges of providing a habitat for current and future generations in a world of continual change These challenges are too complex to be dealt with only by one discipline or profession Combinations of different types of knowledge knowing in praxis and tacit knowledge are needed This book presents and illustrates recent innovative contributions with case studies focusing on five strategic domains and the interrelations between them These transdisciplinary contributions apply concepts methods and tools that facilitate convergence and concerted action between participants collaborating in policy definition and project implementation The methods and tools include experiments in living labs prototypes on site and virtual simulations as well as participatory approaches including citizen science the development of alternative scenarios and visioning plausible futures

Sustainable Communities and Urban Housing Montserrat Pareja-Eastaway,Nessa Winston,2016-12-08 Since the start of the twenty first century urban communities have faced increasing challenges in housing affordability with environmental issues causing additional concern It is clear that changes to urban housing are needed to enhance the resilience of cities and improve the economic social and physical well being of residents This book provides a comparative cross national perspective on urban housing and sustainability in Europe exploring the key barriers and drivers associated with sustainable urban development and community regeneration Country specific chapters allow for easy comparison with each summarizing how sustainable housing operates in the country in question before going on to discuss the key barriers and drivers at play This book brings a sustainability perspective to the comparative housing literature which frequently fails to integrate the social economic and environmental pillars of sustainability The book outlines many of the changes that professionals and residents will need to make to their practices and cultures in order to enhance housing resilience Students researchers and professionals with an interest in sustainable housing creation and regeneration will find this book an invaluable reference

Livable Cities from a Global Perspective Roger Caves,Fritz Wagner,2018-05-11 Livable Cities from a Global Perspective offers case studies from around the world on how cities approach livability They address the fundamental question what is considered livable The journey each city has taken or is currently taking is unique and context specific There is no such thing as a one size fits all approach to livability Some cities have had a long history of developing livability policies and programs that focus on equity economic and environmental concerns while other cities are relatively new to the game In some areas government has taken the lead while in other areas grassroots activism has been the impetus for livability policies and programs The challenge facing our cities is not simply developing a livability program We must continually monitor and readjust policies and programs to meet the livability needs of all people The case studies investigate livability issues in such cities as Austin Texas Helsinki Finland London United Kingdom Warsaw Poland Tehran Iran Salt Lake City United States Rio de Janeiro Brazil Sydney Australia and Cape Town South Africa The chapters are organized into such themes as livability in capital city regions livability and growth and development livability and equity concerns livability and metrics and creating livability Each chapter provides unique insights into how a specific area has responded to calls for livable cities In doing so the book adds to the existing literature in the field of livable cities and provides policy makers and other organizations with information and alternative strategies that have been developed and implemented in an effort to become a livable city

Urban Transformations Sigrun Kabisch, Florian Koch, Erik Gawel, Annegret Haase, Sonja Knapp, Kerstin Krellenberg, Jaime Nivala, Andreas Zehnsdorf, 2018-01-08 The book addresses urban transformations towards sustainability in light of challenges of global urbanization processes and the consequences of global environmental change The aim is to show that urban transformations only succeed if both innovative scientific solutions and practice oriented governance approaches are developed This assumption is addressed by providing theoretical insights and empirical evidence pointing particularly at 3 concepts or qualities which are determined here as being central for achieving urban sustainability resource efficiency quality of life and resilience Urban case studies from several international research projects illustrate our conceptual approach of urban transformations towards sustainable development Thus the book reaches far beyond a mere additive description of single case studies It incorporates the results of condensed synthesis resulting from comparisons and evaluations It provides based on cross cutting reflection of single cases and different scales and methods of analysis general and transferable findings They do not only consider the scientific sphere but deliberately go beyond it discussing transferability of knowledge into practice governance options and the feasibility of policy strategies in order to pave the way for sustainable urban transformations to happen today and in the future

Biesbrouck, Stefan Elders, Gerda Rossel, 1999 Interdisciplinary Measures Graham Huggan, 2008 Where now for postcolonial studies That is the central question in this new volume from one of the field's most original thinkers Huggan's answer is interdisciplinarity and here he sets out a series of conversations between literary studies and other disciplines notably geography environmental studies history and anthropology Huggan aims to establish an alternative trajectory through the field of postcolonial literary cultural studies that is alert to similar kinds of work being done in and across other disciplines and reflects on possible futures for postcolonial studies that move beyond Dead Composers, Living Audiences Gerald Lynn Phillips, 2008 In this well written work the author argues that the present situation regarding the music of the classical tradition is fundamentally untenable While change is of course inevitable the author posits that teachers of the classical music tradition nonetheless have a moral responsibility to do as much as possible to advocate and work toward goals that will hasten and most positively influence the direction of change The author believes that the present relationship between the music of the Western classical tradition and the culture of the present is an unhealthy one The music of dead composers comprises the overwhelming preponderance of music heard today especially in the larger venues such as symphony halls and opera houses Specifically the author argues that we must promote and provide for at least an equal place in our teaching recordings and performances for the music of composers who are living at the time we undertake these activities He further advocates that this is not simply a matter of currency it is a matter of cultural vibrancy even survival and it is an ethical and aesthetic concern toward which we must direct our most serious attention and effort As both a singer and a teacher the author delivers a resounding perspective in this book He also brings the important insights of others from other fields such as literature philosophy and theater The author's discussions revolve around the situation of classical music a situation that in many ways exemplifies the gradual transformation of the rationalization of the world into the radical commodification of the world This outcome will be shown to be intimately linked to ethical and aesthetic issues which will be developed by means of an extended consideration of the conflict between the rational and the irrational as it plays itself out in contrasts between music art and literature and science and philosophy The book delves into the problem of teaching music particularly the problems commonly dealt with in the teaching studio Teachers of the Western music tradition have developed tried and true techniques for dealing with these problems as they occur in teaching generally by helping students toward an understanding of historical musical technical and stylistic problems among a host of others These common problems of teaching are however symptomatic of very deep complicated and endemic philosophical issues that have so far been insufficiently discussed in a form that might be useful to teachers performers and lovers of the music of the Western classical music tradition The most unique contribution of these discussions is the investigation into what is not discussed to any depth in pedagogy books what lies behind or beneath these commonly experienced problems This is a critical book for collections in music Conference Report ,1996 Economic Eye ,1983 Integrating Faith and Learning ,2006

American Families Past and Present Susan M. Ross, 2006 Bringing together essays by twenty one distinguished scholars who have helped shape the field of family sociology in the last decade this interdisciplinary anthology examines variation within family experience especially as it has evolved across racial ethnic social gender and generational lines The essays place historical and institutional frameworks at the center of the discussion In depth chapter introductions along with critical questions to spark class discussion make this an ideal text for courses focusing on family composition trends and controversies in the United States
