

TRIGGER POINT PAIN PATTERNS – Travell and Simons

Trigger point pain patterns are a common cause of musculoskeletal pain. They are characterized by a localized area of muscle tenderness (the trigger point) that can refer pain to other parts of the body. The pain is often described as a sharp, shooting, or burning pain. Trigger point pain patterns can be caused by a variety of factors, including overuse, injury, and stress. They can affect any muscle in the body, but are most commonly found in the neck, shoulder, and forearm. The following diagrams illustrate the pain patterns associated with trigger points in the head and neck, shoulder, thorax, and arm, and forearm and hand.
