Harold Lloyd Wright's Longwood Hall (1906-1907) at the University of Wisconsin-Madison is a landmark in the history of American architecture. It is a prime example of the Prairie School style, which was developed by Wright and his followers. The building is a long, low, horizontal structure with a flat roof and a series of large, arched windows. It is a masterpiece of modernist design and a testament to Wright's genius.

Proposed for discussion by the Planning Commission on May 10, 1966, was preliminary agreement for a study and design contract. The plan was approved by the committee and the Board of Directors.
