Fomina, 2021-10-24 With a focus on the most recent wave of political emigration from Russia unleashed during President Vladimir Putin s third term this book explores the activities of those who voice political dissent after leaving their country Based on rich ethnographic data and interviews gathered among Russian emigrants to the EU member states who are engaged in civic and political participation targeted at their home country it demonstrates that emigration particularly forced emigration in which political dissidents are squeezed out of their country no longer functions efficiently as a means of calming political unrest Drawing on the concept of social remittances the author analyses the content structure and the channels of political democratic remittances sent by political dissidents overseas the factors that shape them and the perceived effects of these endeavours A study of the latest wave of politically charged emigration from Russia and emigrants engagement in homeland politics this volume will appeal to scholars across a range of social sciences working on migration diaspora and democratisation processes citizenship EU studies and Russia studies Muslim Writing, Writing Muslimness in Europe Carmen Zamorano Llena, Billy Gray, Carolina León Vegas, Carles Magrinyà Badiella, 2025-09-25 Throughout the first two decades of the twenty first century the so called Muslim question has intermittently though persistently taken centre stage in Western media and political discourses In terms of culture within the European context there is also a substantial body of literature that has engaged with Western anxieties projected onto the Muslim Other and in particular the Muslim migrant Other Literary criticism of Muslim writing and writing about Muslims in Europe has often highlighted the need to offer a more nuanced articulation of Muslim identity that contributes to challenging such othering practices Critical studies on Muslim writing produced over the last two decades have predominantly focused on contemporary literature and the novel in particular and they have often centred on specific linguistic and national frameworks This collection of essays adds complexity to existing analyses of contemporary Muslim writing and writing about Muslims and Islam in the European context by emphasizing the comparative perspective of writings produced in different epochs and different linguistic and cultural contexts Drawing on transcultural and world literature perspectives Muslim writing is redefined so as to incorporate genres other than the novel and critical approaches that expand on disciplinary redefinitions of literature and literary studies The thematic focus and the rigorous in depth analysis of the different case studies will make this collection relevant to students and academics within the fields of literary and cultural studies sociology and anthropology as well as to those in European studies and global studies

The Juvenile Tradition Laurie Langbauer, 2016-03-25 A juvenile tradition of young writers flourished in Britain between 1750 1835 Canonical Romantic poets as well as now unknown youthful writers published as teenagers These teenage writers reflected on their literary juvenilia by using the trope of prolepsis to assert their writing as a literary tradition Precocious writing child prodigies and early genius had been topics of interest since the eighteenth century Child authors girl poets and boy poets schoolboy writers and undergraduate writers juvenile authors of all kinds found new publication opportunities because of major shifts in the periodical press publishing and education School magazines and popular juvenile magazines that awarded prizes to child writers all made youthful authorship more visible Some historians estimate that minors children and teens comprised over half the population at the beginning of the nineteenth century Modern interest in Romanticism and the self taught and women writers traditions has occluded the tradition of juvenile writers This first full length study to recover the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century juvenile tradition draws on the history of childhood and child studies along with reception study and audience history It considers the literary juvenilia of Thomas Chatterton Henry Kirke White Robert Southey Leigh Hunt Jane Austen and Felicia Hemans then Felicia Dorothea Browne along with the childhood writing of Byron Mary Shelley Percy Shelley and John Keats and a score of other young poets infant bards no longer familiar today Recovering juvenility recasts literary history Adolescent writers acting proleptically ignored the assumptions of childhood development and the disparagement of supposedly immature writing Coda: Poets & Writers Newsletter ,1981
