previously unknown for centuries. Ceasing of Notions is one such text. The text takes a unique form as a dialogue or series of questions and answers between two imaginary figures, master Nyuri and his disciple Emmon, in which the disciple boldly and tenaciously asks follow-up question after follow-up question. And these questions prove to be the reader's very own. Morinaga makes this brilliant and pithy text even more accessible to readers who like the student in the dialogue. Many questions to ask about their own search for the Way of the Buddha and their possible attainment of enlightenment. This volume also includes a generous selection from Morinaga's autobiography. In this very personal, sometimes humorous and ironical reflection, Morinaga Roshi explains why and how, as a young man full of doubt and uncertainty, he chose to devote himself to the Zen monastic practice. In that practice, he did not find immediate enlightenment, but through long hours of meditation, self-inquiry, and the guidance and stimulus of his teacher, Zuigan Roshi, he came to see that he might, after all, let cease his delusive thinking and awaken to Truth. The Zen Life Sōsei Kuzunishi, Kōji Satō, 1966. Living and Dying in Zazen Arthur Braverman, 2003-03-01. Living and Dying in Zazen combines the life stories and teaching of five teachers: Kodo Sawaki, Sodo Yokoyama, Kozan Kato, Motoko Ikebe, and Uchiyama, associated with Antaiji monastery, and the story of Braverman and other Western students coming to grips with Zen, Japanese culture, and themselves. The deification of Zen teachers by their followers has been a problematic issue in American Zen; this book provides a healthy antidote, presenting four men and one woman who have lived and died in Zen within the rich context of their personal lives and their culture, so that we can fully understand what makes a Zen master in Japan. In This Body, In This Lifetime Sozen Nagasawa Roshi, 2025-06-17. Available for the first time in English, an intimate look into the private lives and spiritual experiences of 30 nuns and laywomen practicing under pioneering female Zen master Sozen Nagasawa Roshi in World War II era Japan. Born in 1888, Sozen Nagasawa Roshi was a pioneer of women's monastic Zen practice in Japan. With a profound wish to become a nun from a young age, she persevered through the extreme social pressures and material difficulties facing women of her generation to become an abbess who trained hundreds of students, primarily women, won equal rights for Japanese nuns, and established organizations to support nuns and laywomen practitioners. Known for her compassion and fierceness, Nagasawa Roshi used a rigorous koan practice to guide her students to kensho/enlightenment. As more and more students awakened, she asked them to write about their experiences. These stories were initially published in a Japanese magazine and subsequently compiled into a book published in Japan called Collection of Experiences in Zen Practice In This Body In This Lifetime, is a selection of 30 of these first-person accounts, exclusively from women, and appearing for the first time in English. These stories offer an intimate look into the personal lives and spiritual determination of women who longed to end their suffering and awaken to their true nature, despite the obstacles they faced. A rare glimpse into Zen practice in World War II era Japan, these inspiring women confront loss, grief, food shortages, air raid sirens, and a cultural crisis with grit and courage as they persist in their efforts to end their suffering and the suffering of all. Keep Me in Your Heart a While Dosho Port, 2010-10. Kodo Sawaki Roshi refused to accept a permanent position as a temple abbot despite repeated offers. Instead he lived a traveling homeless life going from temple to temple, student to student, teaching and instructing and never allowing himself to stray from his chosen path. He is responsible for making Soto Zen available to the common people outside of monasteries. His teachings are short, sharp, and powerful. Always clear, often funny, and sometimes uncomfortably close to home, they jolt us into awakening. Kosho Uchiyama expands and explains his teacher's wisdom with his commentary. Trained in Western philosophy, he draws parallels between Zen teachings and the Bible. Descartes and Pascal. Shohaku Okumura has also added his own commentary, grounding his teacher's power and sagacity for the contemporary Western practitioner. Experience the timeless practical wisdom of three generations of Zen masters.

The Rinzai Zen Way Meido Moore, 2018-03-27. The first accessible beginner's guide to Rinzai Zen practice. The recognition of the true nature of oneself and the universe is the aim of Rinzai Zen, but that experience, known as kensho, is really just the beginning of a life of refining that discovery and putting it into practice in the world. Rinzai, with its famed discipline and its emphasis on koan practice, is one of two main forms of Zen practiced in the West, but it is less familiar than the more prominent Soto school. Meido Moore here remedies that situation by providing this compact and complete introduction to Zen philosophy and practice from the Rinzai perspective. It's an excellent entrance to a venerable tradition that goes back through the renowned Hakuin Ekaku in eighteenth-century Japan to its origins in Tang-dynasty China, and that offers a path to living with insight and compassion for people today.

Wholehearted Way, 2011-12-20. The Wholehearted Way is a translation of Eihei Dogen's Bendowa, one of the primary texts on Zen practice. Transcending any particular school of Buddhism or religious belief, Dogen's profound and poetic writings are respected as a pinnacle of world spiritual literature. Bendowa, or A Talk on the Wholehearted Practice of the Way, was written in 1231 A.D. and expresses Dogen's teaching of the essential meaning of zazen, seated meditation, and its practice. This edition also contains commentary on Bendowa by Kosho Uchiyama Roshi, a foreword by Taigen Daniel Leighton, and an Introduction by Shohaku Okumura, both of whom prepared this English translation.
