Autonomy for TCOM

A state attorney general's opinion cleared the way for the Board of Regents to designate a chancellor for TCOM and TCOM without the consent of the Legislature, if the statute is passed.

The opinion was sought by Rep. Ole Lewis of Fort Worth at the request of the Texas-Compulsory Military Association.

The Education Code states that under TCOM a state institution may "TTC" "other educational institution" shall serve in the same capacity for TCOM. It does not specify whether that officer is a chancellor or a president.

TOMBA Executive Director Tim Roberts said the designation of a chancellor for the TCOM system would allow TCOM to have a director of university in its president. He said the question is a matter of prestige and authority. Because other educational institutions in the state have their own presidents.

Roberts said the addition of a president at TCOM would provide a "better administrative effort" through which the schools could facilitate their own special goals and problems. "There needs to be more coordination and cooperation in the future," he said.

One problem Roberts said with the current administrative structure was a "lack of unity." He said the building was not for the future, and Roberts said, "There must be something done administratively for it to be a real building."

However, Roberts admitted the delay could be attributed to many factors.

It appears TCOM's request for autonomy is based more on concerns than substantial considerations. The legal authority for the TCOM system already is a very, very important body.

The proposal that a chancellor and separate president be named would only add to the confusion, and the call for more coordination and cooperation between the schools probably would be facilitated through the existing administrative structure.

Winter commencement

It's time to remember and pay tribute to the forgotten student in the December graduates.

For the May and August graduates, there is a commencement ceremony, but for the December graduates, who must work as hard as his colleagues who graduate in spring or summer, there is no reward.

A recent study showed 40-50 percent of post-December graduates felt strongly about school commitment to return for the ceremony in May.

Observing a degree is not a reason for lack of recognition. Other colleges and universities offer their own commencement in May or June.

In February, the Board of Regents adopted a resolution asking that the vice president for academic affairs study recommending a December ceremony.

President Milgrom, executive vice president, began a study on the possibility, sending surveys to 1977 December 1978 graduates and to 781 seniors who had completed 120 hours or more in spring 1980. The study revealed that of the 21 percent of those who responded to the survey, 90 percent were in favor of a December ceremony.

The study is on President Frank Vandiver's desk, and he will make the final decision. However, the study reveals that although the TCOM system requires a December commencement for the future, December graduates should not expect a ceremony.

The study also found a December 1980 commencement ceremony would be for students to share a common experience. The study also found that 100 percent of the 54 who began an organized effort for post-December commencement this year.

The study suggests students for later responsibility and fight for a December commencement for this year. Action must be taken now, whether through letters to the editor or through petitions for the UN.
