Goldman, 2013-04-05 Alan H Goldman presents an original and lucid account of the relationship between philosophy and the novel In the first part on philosophy of novels he defends theories of literary value and interpretation Literary value the value of literary works as such is a species of aesthetic value Goldman argues that works have aesthetic value when they simultaneously engage all our mental capacities perceptual cognitive imaginative and emotional This view contrasts with now prevalent narrower formalist views of literary value According to it cognitive engagement with novels includes appreciation of their broad themes and the theses these imply often moral and hence philosophical theses which are therefore part of the novels literary value Interpretation explains elements of works so as to allow readers maximum appreciation so as to maximize the literary value of the texts as written Once more Goldman s view contrasts with narrower views of literary interpretation especially those which limit it to uncovering what authors intended One implication of Goldman s broader view is the possibility of incompatible but equally acceptable interpretations which he explores through a discussion of rival interpretations of Ernest Hemingway s The Sun Also Rises Goldman goes on to test the theory of value by explaining the immense appeal of good mystery novels in its terms The second part of the book on philosophy in novels explores themes relating to moral agency moral development motivation and disintegration in Jane Austen s Pride and Prejudice Mark Twain s Huckleberry Finn John Irving s The Cider House Rules and Joseph Conrad s Nostromo By narrating the course of characters lives including their inner lives over extended periods these novels allow us to vicariously experience the characters moral progressions positive and negative to learn in a more focused way moral truths as we do from real life experiences

Paperbacks in Print, 1969 Hermeneutic Philosophy of Science, Van Gogh's Eyes, and God B.E. Babich, 2013-06-29 perceptual essences that can be rendered directly manifest in perception with the help of theoretically structured instruments serving as readable technologies Scientific knowledge should thus be understood as an extension of unassisted perception A perceptual fact has an outer horizon which separates it from the ground on which it appears and an inner horizon composed of a multiplicity of possible perceptual profiles organized by an invariant essence The perceiving subject can bring forth a representative sample of the profiles in question occasionally by making use of certain technological processes which are themselves subject to interpretation in terms of theoretical representations The theoretical entities described in these representations are not simply detected thanks to an inferential operation but rather they are directly perceived It follows from this that the correspondence between the manifest image and the scientific image is not done one to one but by a many to one or one to many application between contextually defined perceptual objects within contexts that are mutually incompatible but complementary This should not however be understood as a form of conventionalism nor as a form of cultural relativism Pre comprehension which guides interpretation imposes strict limits to the descriptive categories which can be used and to the manner in which they can be linked to appropriate empirical objects The author applies his hermeneutic principles to the study of visual perception In fact this question is treated in the first part of the book
