Archives, Documentation, and Institutions of Social Memory Francis Xavier Blouin, William G. Rosenberg, 2006-03-31 As sites of documentary preservation rooted in various national and social contexts artifacts of culture and places of uncovering archives provide tangible evidence of memory for individuals communities and states as well as defining memory institutionally within prevailing political systems and cultural norms By assigning the prerogatives of record keeper to the archivist whose acquisition policies finding aids and various institutionalized predilections mediate between scholarship and information archives produce knowledge legitimize political systems and construct identities Far from being mere repositories of data archives actually embody the fragments of culture that endure as signifiers of who we are and why The essays in Archives Documentation and Institutions of Social Memory conceive of archives not simply as historical repositories but as a complex of structures processes and epistemologies situated at a critical point of the intersection between scholarship cultural practices politics and technologies
