perceptions, and confidence in the use of IIRs. The following issues were raised: the complexity and ambiguity, the impact on the quality of and economic importance of the service. The recommendations call for steps to be taken to improve the use of IIRs: criteria to be formulated, agencies should distinguish 'individuals' and 'businesses', highlight the needs and concerns of businesses, highlight the needs and concerns of individuals, highlight the needs and concerns of businesses, and highlight the needs and concerns of individuals. The recommendations also call for the development of a 'business' and 'individual' criteria to be used to distinguish between the two, and the development of a 'business' and 'individual' criteria to be used to distinguish between the two.

Abstracting/Revising: The design of case abstracting is a complex task that the author (primary investigator) and the design facilitator who contributed a revised design had to address. A revised design called for a set of 10 abstracts to be designed by the design facilitator and approved by the investigator. The design facilitator's goal for abstracting and revising "Fast Lane" was to "abstract clearly" rather than to "illustrate" and "show" and to adhere to the revised design's emphasis on case abstracting.
