History of Chinese Political Thought Youngmin Kim, 2018-03-16 China's rapid rise as a regional and global power is one of the most important political developments of the twenty first century Yet the West still largely overlooks or oversimplifies the complex ideas and ideals that have shaped the country's national and international transformation from antiquity to the present day In this beautifully written introductory text Youngmin Kim offers a uniquely incisive survey of the major themes in Chinese political thought from customary community to empire exploring their theoretical importance and the different historical contexts in which they arose Challenging traditional assumptions about Chinese nationalism and Marxist history Kim shows that China does not have a fixed single identity but rather is a constantly moving target His probing interdisciplinary approach traces the long and nuanced history of Chinese thought as a true tradition anchored in certain key themes many of which began in the early dynasties and still resonate in China today Only by appreciating this rich history he argues can we begin to understand the intricacies and contradictions of contemporary Chinese politics economy and society

Childhood, 1868 Selected Works on China Various Authors, Let me state at the outset that I know no Chinese My duty in Mrs Ayscough's and my joint collaboration has been to turn her literal translations into poems as near to the spirit of the originals as it was in my power to do It has been a long and arduous task but one which has amply repaid every hour spent upon it To be suddenly introduced to a new and magnificent literature not through the medium of the usual more or less accurate translation but directly as one might burrow it out for one's self with the aid of a dictionary is an exciting and inspiring thing The method we adopted made this possible as I shall attempt to show The study of Chinese is so difficult that it is a life work in itself so is the study of poetry A sinologue has no time to learn how to write poetry a poet has no time to learn how to read Chinese Since neither of us pretended to any knowledge of the other's craft our association has been a continually augmenting pleasure I was lucky indeed to approach Chinese poetry through such a medium The translations I had previously read had given me nothing Mrs Ayscough has been to me the pathway to a new world No one could be a more sympathetic go between for a poet and his translator and Mrs Ayscough was well fitted for her task She was born in Shanghai Her father who was engaged in business there was a Canadian and her mother an American She lived in China until she was eleven when her parents returned to America in order that their children might finish their education in this country It was then that I met her so that our friendship is no new thing but has persisted in spite of distance for more than thirty years to ripen in the end into a partnership which is its culmination Returning to China in her early twenties she became engaged to an Englishman connected with a large British importing house in Shanghai and on her marriage which took place almost immediately went back to China where she has lived ever since A diligent student of Chinese life and manners she soon took up the difficult study of literary Chinese and also accepted the position of honorary librarian of the library of the North China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society Of late years she has delivered a number of lectures on Chinese subjects in China Japan America and Canada and has also found time to write various pamphlets on Chinese literature and customs In the Autumn of 1917 Mrs Ayscough arrived in America on one of her periodic visits to this country She brought with her a large collection of Chinese paintings for exhibition and among these paintings were a number of examples of the Written Pictures Of these she had made some rough translations which she intended to use to illustrate her lectures She brought them to me with a request that I put them into poetic shape I was fascinated by the poems and as we talked them over we realized that here was a field in which we should like to work When she returned to China it was agreed that we should make a volume of translations from the classic Chinese writers Such translations were in the line of her usual work and I was anxious to read the Chinese poets as nearly in the original as it was possible for me to do At first we hardly considered publication Mrs Ayscough lives in Shanghai and I in Boston and the war time mails were anything but expeditious but an enthusiastic publisher kept constantly before us our ultimate if remote goal Four years have passed and after many unavoidable delays the book is finished We have not done it all by correspondence Mrs Ayscough has come back to America several times during its preparation but whether together or apart the plan on which we have worked has always been the same Very early in our studies we realized that the component parts of the Chinese written character counted for more in the composition of poetry than has generally been recognized that the poet chose one character rather than another which meant practically the same thing because of the descriptive allusion in the make up of that particular character that the poem was enriched precisely through this undercurrent of meaning in the structure of its characters But not always and here was the difficulty Usually the character must be taken merely as the word it had been created to mean It was a nice distinction when to allow one self the use of these character undercurrents and when to leave them out of count entirely But I would not have my readers suppose that I have changed or exaggerated the Chinese text Such has not been the case The analysis of characters has been employed very rarely and only when the text seemed to lean on the allusion for an added vividness or zest In only one case in the book have I permitted myself to use an adjective not inherent in the character with which I was dealing and in that case the connotation was in the word itself being descriptive of an architectural structure for which we have no equivalent except in the Written Pictures where as Mrs Ayscough has stated in her Introduction we allowed ourselves a somewhat freer treatment It has been necessary of course to acquire some knowledge of the laws of Chinese versification But equally of course these rules could only serve to bring me into closer relations with the poems and the technical limits of the various forms It was totally impossible to follow either the rhythms or the rhyme schemes of the originals All that could be done was to let the English words fall into their natural rhythm and not attempt to handicap the exact word by introducing rhyme at all This is the method I followed in my translations of French poems in my book Six French Poets I hold that it is more important to reproduce the perfume of a poem than its metrical form and no translation can possibly reproduce both

Meng: The Dream of the Red Chamber, A Chinese Novel (Complete) Xueqin Cao, This is the opening section this the first chapter Subsequent to the visions of a dream which he had on some previous occasion experienced the writer personally relates he designedly concealed the true circumstances and borrowed the attributes of perception and spirituality to relate this story of the Record of the Stone With this purpose he made use of such designations as Chen Shih yin truth under the garb of fiction and the like What are however the events recorded in this work Who are the dramatis personae Wearied with the drudgery experienced of late in the world the author speaking for himself goes on to explain with the lack of success which attended every single concern I suddenly bethought myself of the womankind of past ages Passing one by one under a minute scrutiny I felt that in action and in lore one and all were far above me that in spite of the majesty of my manliness I could not in point of fact compare with these characters of the gentle sex And my shame forsooth then knew no bounds while regret on the other hand was of no avail as there was not even a remote possibility of a day of remedy On this very day it was that I became desirous to compile in a connected form for publication throughout the world with a view to universal information how that I bear inexorable and manifold retribution inasmuch as what time by the sustenance of the benevolence of Heaven and the virtue of my ancestors my apparel was rich and fine and as what days my fare was savory and sumptuous I disregarded the bounty of education and nurture of father and mother and paid no heed to the virtue of precept and injunction of teachers and friends with the result that I incurred the punishment of failure recently in the least trifle and the reckless waste of half my lifetime There have been meanwhile generation after generation those in the inner chambers the whole mass of whom could not on any account be through my influence allowed to fall into extinction in order that I unfilial as I have been may have the means to screen my own shortcomings Hence it is that the thatched shed with bamboo mat windows the bed of tow and the stove of brick which are at present my share are not sufficient to deter me from carrying out the fixed purpose of my mind And could I furthermore confront the morning breeze the evening moon the willows by the steps and the flowers in the courtyard methinks these would moisten to a greater degree my mortal pen with ink but though I lack culture and erudition what harm is there however in employing fiction and unrecondite language to give utterance to the merits of these characters And were I also able to induce the inmates of the inner chamber to understand and diffuse them could I besides break the weariness of even so much as a single moment or could I open the eyes of my contemporaries will it not forsooth prove a boon This consideration has led to the usage of such names as Chia Y ts un and other similar appellations More than any in these pages have been employed such words as dreams and visions but these dreams constitute the main argument of this work and combine furthermore the design of giving a word of warning to my readers Reader can you suggest whence the story begins The narration may border on the limits of incoherency and triviality but it possesses considerable zest But to begin The Empress N Wo the goddess of works in fashioning blocks of stones for the repair of the heavens prepared at the Ta Huang Hills and Wu Ch i cave 36 501 blocks of rough stone each twelve chang in height and twenty four chang square Of these stones the Empress Wo only used 36 500 so that one single block remained over and above without being turned to any account This was cast down the Ch ing Keng peak This stone strange to say after having undergone a process of refinement attained a nature of efficiency and could by its innate powers set itself into motion and was able to expand and to contract When it became aware that the whole number of blocks had been made use of to repair the heavens that it alone had been destitute of the necessary properties and had been unfit to attain selection it forthwith felt within itself vexation and shame and day and night it gave way to anguish and sorrow One day while it lamented its lot it suddenly caught sight at a great distance of a Buddhist bonze and of a Taoist priest coming towards that direction Their appearance was uncommon their easy manner remarkable When they drew near this Ch ing Keng peak they sat on the ground to rest and began to converse But on noticing the block newly polished and brilliantly clear which had moreover contracted in dimensions and become no larger than the pendant of a fan they were greatly filled with admiration The Buddhist priest picked it up and laid it in the palm of his hand
