Abstract: This paper examines the impact of the 1997-1998 Asian financial crisis on the performance of the Korean stock market. The results show that the Korean stock market experienced a significant decline in performance during the crisis period, which was primarily driven by a sharp drop in stock prices and a decline in trading volume. The study also finds that the Korean stock market's performance was negatively affected by the crisis, leading to a decrease in investor confidence and a shift in market sentiment. The findings suggest that the Korean stock market is highly sensitive to external shocks, and the government should implement measures to stabilize the market and restore investor confidence during such periods.
