Natural Potency and Political Power Sarinda Singh, 2012-01-31 Forests as physical entities have received considerable scholarly attention in political studies of Asia and beyond Much less notice has been paid to the significance of forests as symbols that enable commentary on identity aspirations and authority Natural Potency and Political Power an innovative exploration of the social and political importance of forests in contemporary Laos challenges common views of the rural countryside as isolated and disconnected from national social debates and politics under an authoritarian regime It offers instead a novel understanding of local perspectives under authoritarianism demonstrating that Lao people make implicit political statements in their commentary on forests and wildlife and showing that in addition to being vital material resources forests and their natural potency are linked in the minds of many Lao to the social and political power of the state Sarinda Singh explores the intertwining of symbolic and material concerns in local debates over conservation and development the popularity of wildlife consumption the particular importance of elephants and forest loss and mismanagement In doing so she draws on ethnographic fieldwork around Vientiane the capital and Nakai site of the contentious Nam Theun 2 hydropower project places that are broadly reflective of the divide between urban prosperity and rural poverty Nam Theun 2 supported by the World Bank highlights the local regional and global dynamics that influence discussions of forest resources in Laos Government officials rural villagers and foreign consultants all contribute to competing ideas about forests and wildlife Singh advances research on forest politics by rethinking how ideas about nature influence social life Her work refutes the tendency to see modern social life as independent of historical influences and her attention to viewpoints both inside and outside the state prompts an understanding of authoritarian regimes as not only sources of repression but also sites of negotiation engagement and debate about the legitimacy of social inequalities

Proceedings of the International Conference on Regional Workshop on Asian Elephant Health Care--Programme Development ,1999 The Acquisition of Numeral Classifiers Kasumi Yamamoto,2011-05-03 The book is about the numeral classifier system and the acquisition of Japanese classifiers by Japanese children It consists of two parts First it provides a general typological characterization of numeral classifier phrases and discusses problems in determining what constitutes the nature of classifiers It also discusses the semantic properties of numeral classifiers based on an analysis of four languages from four different language families Second it examines the acquisitions of Japanese numeral classifiers by Japanese preschool children ages 3 to 6 with a primary emphasis on the development of comprehension The importance of the study is that it reveals that young children have a much greater sensitivity to the conceptual underpinnings of the numeral classifier system than was previously considered to be the case The research results also provide a converging source of evidence that young children often come to initially grasp the structure of the world in ways that are better understood in cognitive than perceptual terms The implications will contribute to not only the area of language acquisition but also categorization and conceptual development Eco-Urbanism and the South East Asian City Shireen Jahn Kassim,Noor Hanita Abdul Majid,Dzulkifli Abdul Razak,2023-04-13 This book traces the history of urban design in tropical South East Asia with a view to offering solutions to contemporary architectural and urban problems The book examines how pre colonial forms and patterns from South East Asian traditional cities overlaid by centuries of change recall present notions of ecological and organic urbanism These may look disorganised yet they reflect and suggest certain common patterns that inform eco urban design paradigms for the development of future cities Taking a thematic approach the book examines how such historical findings debates and discussions can assist designers and policy makers to interpret and then instil identities in urban design across the Asian region The book weaves a discourse across planning urban design architecture and ornamentation dimensions to reconstruct forgotten forms that align with the climate of place and resynchronise with the natural world unearthing an ecologically benign urbanism that can inform the future Written in an accessible style this book will be an invaluable reference for researchers and students within the fields of cultural geography urban studies and architecture
