Adult Mental Disorders

INTRODUCTION

Burden of Disease

Mental disorders are a diverse group of conditions that primarily impair cognition, emotions, and behavioral control; occur early in life; and have a high aggregate prevalence in all countries where epidemiology has been investigated (Demyttenaere and others 2004;essler, Berglund, and others 2005; WHO 1992). The combination of high prevalence, early onset, clinical course that is either chronic or remitting and relapsing, and impairment of critical brain functions makes mental disorders a major contributor to the global disease burden discussed in chapter 2 in this volume (Whiteford and others 2015). The greatest fraction of the burden results from years lived with disability (YLDs), particularly for ages 15–49 years—a critical life interval for completing education, starting a family, and increasing productivity at work (figure 4.1) (WHO 2014b). The global cost of mental health conditions is projected to be as high as US$6 trillion by 2030, of which 35 percent would be contributed by low- and middle-income countries (LMICs) (Bloom and others 2011).

Although mental disorders directly account for fewer than half of one percent of all deaths, they contribute significantly to premature mortality through multiple medical causes (discussed in chapter 3 in this volume, Charlson and others 2015) and are a major risk factor for suicide (WHO 2014c; chapter 9 in this volume, Vijayakumar and others 2015). An estimated

8 million deaths annually due to medical conditions are attributable to mental disorders (Walker, McGee, and Druss 2015).

Mental disorders are associated with social stigma in many countries and cultures (Weiss and others 2001). The slow emergence of scientific explanations for the etiologies of mental disorders and the mistaken belief that symptoms reflect either a lack of will power or some moral failure facilitate negative attitudes and discrimination. Patients with psychotic symptoms can seem frightening, but persons with mental illnesses are far more likely to commit suicide than homicide and to be victims of crimes than perpetrators (The Lancet 2013; Walsh and others 2003). Shame and fear are substantial obstacles to help-seeking, diagnosis, and treatment. Individuals with mental disorders are often imprisoned, without access to adequate care, for minor legal transgressions that result directly from their illnesses. In many mental hospitals and other settings, people with these disorders may not be accorded basic human rights. Stigmatization has contributed to disparities in availability and access to care and medications and insurance coverage, as well as research funding, compared with other chronic illnesses (Wang, Aguilar-Gaxiola, and others 2007).

This chapter updates data on the disease burden, as well as interventions to treat the four leading contributors to adult mental illness globally—schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, depressive disorders, and anxiety disorders. These were selected because of their high contribution to the global disease burden, accounting

Women and Mental Disorders Paula K. Lundberg-Love, Kevin L. Nadal, Michele A. Paludi, 2011-11-08 For too long studies lumped women's mental health with that of men notwithstanding profound differences This groundbreaking work decisively addresses that oversight as a team of expert scholars and therapists spotlights common female mental disorders explores the causes and explains available therapies In the last two decades feminist therapists and scholars have called for new models of mental health that value women and femininity To that end the four volume Women and Mental Disorders brings together recent research and theory to explore its subject from a feminist perspective This exhaustive set treats every aspect of women's mental health from diagnoses to treatment Underlying the entire work is an awareness of varying cultural definitions of mental health and the importance of understanding a woman's cultural background if treatment is to be respectful and successful Special attention is also paid to women who have been victims of violence whether in intimate relationships the workplace or at school and to how these experiences impact mental and physical health self concept interpersonal relationships and career development Approaches to treating women with eating disorders agoraphobia anxiety and depression PTSD and personality disorders are covered as well Finally the set provides resources to help readers address their own needs or those of friends and family

COVID-19 and Women's Health, 2nd edition Stephen Kennedy, Laura A. Magee, Stacey A. Missmer, Jayashri Kulkarni, Vassiliki Benetou, Marianne Vidler, Chelsea Morroni, 2023-02-07 As a result of the Coronavirus disease COVID 19 pandemic the world is facing one of the greatest challenges we have experienced in over a century The economic consequences for society at large are potentially catastrophic The health and social care sectors have reacted by providing emergency care on an unprecedented scale while the scientific community has focused on developing new treatments and a vaccine to prevent future waves of the pandemic Evidence is emerging to suggest that certain conditions such as obesity and hypertension predispose some individuals to a worse outcome if they become infected and that women may be less likely to die from COVID 19 than men It is also currently believed that pregnant women are at no greater risk than the general population There is an urgent need to determine whether these early observations are correct Furthermore we need to be sure that pregnancy outcomes are not affected by COVID 19 and that SARS CoV 2 is not transmitted to the fetus during pregnancy or labour nor to the infant through breast milk There are so many questions that need to be answered to optimise care avoid harm reduce anxiety amongst women and their families and inform health professionals and policymakers We also need to understand the unintended consequences of the global lockdown on women's health in general For example have rates of domestic violence risen to what extent has women's mental health been affected and have women successfully adapted or devised new coping mechanisms have women been denied access to gynaecological treatments during the lockdown including safe abortion and if so with what impact on their health and wellbeing has the female work force suffered disproportionately in economic terms have national and international recommendations and policies been sufficiently gender neutral have breastfeeding rates been adversely affected will COVID 19 make attainment of the UN SDGs more difficult etc In keeping with the Scope Mission of Frontiers in Global Women's Health this Research Topic aims to provide a multi disciplinary platform to answer important COVID 19 related questions that specifically impact upon women's health and wellbeing particular in resource poor settings The Topic Editors welcome a broad range of contributions including Original Research Reviews Commentaries Study Protocols and Systematic Reviews We would like to acknowledge Dr Nathalie MacDermott and Dr Rhiannon George Carey who have acted as coordinators and have contributed to the preparation of the proposal for this Research Topic Given the exceptional nature of the COVID 19 situation Frontiers is waiving all article publishing charges for COVID 19 related research in this Research Topic Please note that manuscripts must be submitted by the deadline of December 31st
