ABSTRACT Concerns about women under-representation in positions of decision making, strategic planning, organizational development and their performance within distance education institutions has been the major focus of debates in higher education. The current study sought to investigate the challenges faced by women in distance education management positions, which were formerly dominated by males. The qualitative study examined and analysed the social, economic, traditional, political and religious factors influencing the degree of women advancement in Open Distance Learning (ODL) senior management positions. Data was collected through face to face interviews with one hundred and twenty staff members employed at the Zimbabwe Open University (ZOU) using the purposive sampling technique. The major finding from the study was that women in senior management positions were affected by these multiple responsibilities which include the gendered nature of society, family influences and culture. The study recommends the holding of open and honest discussion forums on gender and equal rights issues involving both men and women and the development of family friendly culture in universities.

INTRODUCTION

The under-representation of women in senior management positions in higher institutions of learning and indeed other spheres is problematic and has become a major issue of debate in higher education circles (See for example: Nan-Chi 2006; Kiamba 2008; Bilen-Green 2008; Nazemi et al 2012; Zinyemba 2013). The cited literature further indicates that ancient systems of management under which men were assigned a monopoly of access to higher managerial positions of authority and power in organizations and the public sphere, with women restricted to the home, has come under attack in both developed and most developing countries. While efforts seem to be in place to accelerate the advancement of women, the number of women who achieve senior management positions is still disproportionate to the number of women employed in the universities. In the United States, in 2006, women accounted for twenty three percent of college and university presidents, which was up from five percent of presidents in 1975 (Madden 2012), a token improvement of only five percent in more than 30 years! A United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural organisation (UNESCO) report cited in Ramsey (2000) found out that globally, women were grossly under-represented in higher education management with men outnumbering women at about five to one at middle management level and at about twenty to one at senior management level. Closer home in South Africa, survey data on South Africa, cited in Zinyemba (2013) showed that in 2003, the average number of women in senior management was approximately twenty four percent across seventeen institutions of higher learning and that at that point in time there were only three female Vice Chancellors, while eighty two percent of professors were male and only eighteen percent were female.

Notwithstanding the above statistics, a majority of talented and competent women in Zimbabwe and the world over have emerged from the home to occupy senior management positions in educational management. The emergence of women in higher positions of authority or into larger roles in corporate governance in higher education and distance education in par-

Higher Education Realigning Recentering and Rebuilding is a book that addresses the challenges faced by women leaders in higher education during the current pandemic. The book is written by experts in the field and draws on emerging evidence based practices and personal narratives to provide insights into strategies for emotional balance self care and wellbeing for women leaders. It explores the challenges faced by women leaders in higher education and offers solutions for their wellbeing including reframing and reinventing oneself during the pandemic. This volume is an essential read for women in leadership faculty administrators professional staff graduate students and researchers. It provides valuable information and perspectives on creating access for marginalized groups using roles as women leaders to create change and nurturing and empowering women in leadership. Overall it is a persuasive and powerful book that will help readers to realign recenter and rebuild in their personal and professional lives.

Research Anthology on Challenges for Women in Leadership Roles Management Association, Information Resources, 2021-03-19. The role of women in the workplace has rapidly advanced and changed within the previous decade leading to a current position in which women are taking over leadership roles and being offered these positions more than ever before. However a gap still exists with the representation of women in the workforce especially in power positions and roles of authority in organizations. While the representation of women in leadership roles is impressive and exciting for the future women still face many challenges when taking over these positions of power and face many issues related to gender inclusivity. There is also still gender bias and discrimination against women who have been given the opportunity to become authority figures. It is essential to acknowledge and discuss these critical issues and challenges that women in leadership roles must handle to better understand the current climate of gender roles across various industries and types of leadership. The Research Anthology on Challenges for Women in Leadership Roles discusses the role of women in positions of authority across diverse industries and businesses. By reviewing the biases struggles discrimination and overall challenges of being a woman in a powerful role women leaders can be better understood for their role in a male dominated world. This includes topics of concern such as equal treatment proper implementation of women's policies social justice activism discrimination and sexual harassment in the workplace and the importance of diversity and empowerment of women in leadership positions with chapters pertaining specifically to African American Hispanic Asian and Middle Eastern women. This book is ideal for professionals researchers managers executives leaders academicians sociologists policymakers and students in fields that include humanities social sciences women's studies gender studies business management management science health sciences educational studies and political sciences.
