The Trial Of Dr Adams:

The Trial of Dr. Adams Sybille Bedford, 1959 Two Men Were Acquitted Percy Hoskins, 1984 Easing the Passing Patrick Baron Devlin, 2004

Easing the passing of a dying person isn't all that wicked. She wanted to die that can't be murder. This was the essence of the defence of Dr John Bodkin Adams who was acquitted of the murder of one of his patients in 1957. In this book the judge who presided over this murder trial gives his own account analysing both the prosecution and the defence and pointing out the important issues it raised both legal and medical. California. Court of Appeal (2nd Appellate District). Records and Briefs California (State)., The Trial of John Bodkin Adams David Holding (Historical researcher), 2020-01-25

John Bodkin Adams a Killer Doctor. The Trial of Dr John Bodkin Adams was David Holding's sixth publication with Words Are Life. Scott Martin Productions and the second in our Doctors of Death trilogy. The trilogy centres on the criminal trials of three English general medical practitioners who stood trial for murder during the 20th century. Dr John Bodkin Adams practised as a GP in Eastbourne from the 1920s to the 1950s and was tried and acquitted for the murder of a patient in 1957. He was regarded by some as a serial killer and provided the model which was later followed by the infamous Doctor Harold Shipman, the subject of our first volume The Last Temptation by David Holding, book available on Amazon. Read about one of the greatest murder trials of the century. The author details the trial and looks into the legal principle of double effect, inviting the reader to consider their own verdict based on all the evidence. The author's legal experience and analytical thought processes are clearly in play throughout this fascinating book. Dr David Holding studied history at Manchester University before entering the teaching profession in the 1970s. He taught in both state and independent sectors. During this time he continued historical research, culminating in both a Master's degree and a Doctorate. Having previously studied law, David gained a Master of Law degree in Medical Law which enabled him to transfer to teaching legal courses at university. Since retiring, David has concentrated his research and writing on various aspects of local history, legal trials, forensic science and medico-legal topics. Published by Words Are Life. A Stranger in Blood Pamela Cullen, 2006

In 1957 Dr Bodkin Adams was accused of murder. This is an eerily familiar story: a charmer using drugs to control patients, maintaining poor records and causing concern amongst fellow professionals. Yet for over twenty years he avoided any police investigation, mainly because of the popular disbelief that a doctor could be a serial killer. The police had a strong case against Bodkin Adams. Many of his patients' deaths followed a similar pattern: the deceased was generally an elderly woman of means in Dr Adams' private practice; he was often the last person to see the deceased alive and visited several times on the day they died. Frequently mentioned in his patients' wills, he was bequeathed two Rolls Royces. His behaviour made the local legal community concerned. Eventually only one local solicitor would work with the Doctor in the drawing up of patients' wills. However, in spite of the welter of evidence, the case against Adams failed at trial. Following close on Dame Janet Smith's Shipman Inquiry report, Pamela Cullen's book is chilling and timely The author has had unique access to police files on the case here made available for the first time and ultimately she questions whether any system for monitoring the behaviour of doctors can protect patients from a cunning motivated rogue doctor with a taste for murder Murder Cases of the Twentieth Century David K.
