Global Norms in the Twenty-First Century Klaus-Gerd Giesen, Kees van der Pijl, 2009-03-26

Norms in the contemporary world system are no longer established exclusively through inter state agreement but increasingly are becoming truly global This is made possible by the rapid privatisation of law and the self regulation of the transnational private sector Other forces driving this epochal transformation are the overwhelming pre eminence of the United States the erosion of the role of the United Nations and the appearance of new actors such as subnational entities and NGOs They all contribute to the creation and ideological justification of new norms This collection brings together critical studies on this complex process Written by authors from eleven different countries both established scholars and young specialists the book challenges the often convenient rationalisations of regime theory the governance approach and post national or cosmopolitan democracy in order to explore the practical theoretical and ethical implications of the new world of global norms

International Relations: The Basics , Gender, Human Security and the United Nations Natalie Florea Hudson, 2009-09-22

This book examines the relationship between women gender and the international security agenda exploring the meaning of security in terms of discourse and practice as well as the larger goals and strategies of the global women's movement Today many complex global problems are being located within the security logic From the environment to HIV AIDS state and non state actors have made a practice out of securitizing issues that are not conventionally seen as such As most prominently demonstrated by the UN Security Council Resolution 1325 2001 activists for women's rights have increasingly framed women's rights and gender inequality as security issues in an attempt to gain access to the international security agenda particularly in the context of the United Nations This book explores the nature and implications of the use of security language as a political framework for women tracing and analyzing the organizational dynamics of women's activism in the United Nations system and how women have come to embrace and been impacted by the security framework globally and locally The book argues that from a feminist and human security perspective efforts to engender the security discourse have had both a broadening and limiting effect highlighting reasons to be sceptical of securitization as an inherently beneficial strategy Four cases studies are used to develop the core themes 1 the campaign to implement UN Security Council Resolution 1325 2 the strategies utilized by those advocating women s issues in the security arena compared to those advocating for children 3 the organizational development of the UN Development Fund for Women and how it has come to securitize women and 4 the activity of the UN Peacebuilding Commission and its challenges in gendering its security approach The work will be of interest to students of critical security gender studies international organizations and international relations in general Natalie Florea Hudson received her PhD in Political Science from the University of Connecticut and is an Assistant Professor at the University of Dayton She specializes in gender and international relations human rights international security studies and international law and organization The United Nations and Changing World Politics David P. Forsythe, Roger A. central issue in international peace and security This book offers a multidisciplinary treatment of this important topic harnessing perspectives from international law and international relations traversing academia and practice Moving from the historical and philosophical development of the civilian protection concept through relevant bodies of international law and normative underpinnings and on to politics and practice the volume presents coherent cross cutting analysis of the realities of conflict and diplomacy In doing so it engages a series of current debates including on the role of politics in what has often been characterized as a humanitarian endeavour and the challenges and impacts of the use of force The work brings together a wide array of eminent academics and respected practitioners incorporating contributions from legal scholars and ethicists political commentators diplomats UN officials military commanders development experts and humanitarian aid workers As the most comprehensive publication on the subject this will be a first port of call for anyone studying or working towards a better protection of civilians in conflict
