Johnson, National Association for the Education of Young Children. Convention, 1982 Systematic efforts at the Arizona State Child Study Laboratory were successful in replacing children's undesirable superhero play with other types of sociodramatic play Teachers found superhero play undesirable because it was aggressive and noisy and was accompanied by an increase in random activity Observations indicated that superhero play had all six elements of sociodramatic play discussed by Smilansky but did not fully develop them Specifically such play was limited in the roles adopted by children did not build on past experience or encourage sharing ideas through language and emphasized conflicts that were resolved by physical aggression or flying away However the popularity of superhero play showed that it met real needs for active play and for expressing angry and aggressive feelings Other sociodramatic play was encouraged by gradually introducing costumes props and materials around a theme such as transportation or a grocery store and by preparing the children through field trips discussion and stories The teacher's general role was to deliberately enrich and change the environment and to suggest techniques for getting along with others if conflicts arose However the teacher had to supplement her role with children who depended on a superhero identity to compensate for their lack of self esteem and social skills by directing them into new activities CB
