Magnaporthe oryzae is a fungal pathogen that can cause infections in plants. The pathogen is able to cause disease such as rice seedling blight, which often kills the cuticles of rice plants. Rice plants are a major food source in certain communities, so an outbreak of M. oryzae is of major concern in some areas. It is known that M. oryzae is frequently found in the environment, but generally is unable to survive in non-plant hosts.
