The 12 Powers of Mentoring Craig Andrew McEwen, 2004 This book is a story of how two teachers gave twenty students recognition for being the cause of their learning for making the choice to learn for themselves for being independent capable responsible and powerful It is a day by day description of a revolutionary five day orientation that happened each year at the Mobile Open Classroom MOBOC in Los Angeles from 1971 to 1983 It is a true story of a real school not a technical lesson plan which 1 demonstrates timeless MOBOC concepts in action 2 educates the reader in respectful and motivating behaviors toward middle schoolers and 3 creates both a longing for this kind of success with teens and a sense of urgency for educational reform. It is a book for parents, educators, and activists and extraordinarily relevant to public education today. The story opens with Chris, a student who has been kicked out of five schools, and it follows him as he is transformed by being given his personal power to learn. Like most students, those in this story believed that learning was demanded by someone else: a parent, a teacher, or some other external authority. They were not learning for themselves but rather for those others or for the grades. At the end of each year, MOBOC students were tested on the same battery of tests used by schools across Los Angeles, and they met or exceeded the highest scores of all other schools, dispelling the fear that such a radical departure from traditional schooling and teaching will result in irresponsible behavior and low grades. In this book, Craig McEwen, MOBOC's head teacher and long-time director, lays out the secrets of his pedagogic techniques. In an easy-to-read series of stories, he reveals how MOBOC got its students to take on responsibility for their own education while not falling into the anything-goes pitfalls of free-choice schools.

Foundations of Knowledge Acquisition Susan Chipman, Alan L. Meyrowitz, 2012-12-06 One of the most intriguing questions about the new computer technology that has appeared over the past few decades is whether we humans will ever be able to make computers learn. As is painfully obvious to even the most casual computer user, most current computers do not. Yet if we could devise learning techniques that enable computers to routinely improve their performance through experience, the impact would be enormous. The result would be an explosion of new computer applications that would suddenly become economically feasible: e.g., personalized computer assistants that automatically tune themselves to the needs of individual users and a dramatic improvement in the quality of current computer applications: e.g., imagine an airline scheduling program that improves its scheduling method based on analyzing past delays. And while the potential economic impact of successful learning methods is sufficient reason to invest in research into machine learning, there is a second significant reason: studying machine learning helps us understand our own human learning abilities and disabilities, leading to the possibility of improved methods in education. While many open questions remain about the methods by which machines and humans might learn, significant progress has been made.
