Women and Gender in International History Karen Garner, 2018-06-28 Most governments and global political organizations have been dominated by male leaders and structures that institutionalize male privilege As Women and Gender in International History reveals however women have participated in and influenced the traditional concerns of international history even as they have expanded those concerns in new directions Karen Garner provides a timely synthesis of key scholarship and establishes the influential roles that women and gender power relations have wielded in determining the course of international history From the early 20th century onward women have participated in state to state relations and decisions about when to pursue diplomacy or when to go to war to settle international conflicts Particular women as well as masculine and feminine gender role constructs have also influenced the establishment and evolution of intergovernmental organizations and their political social and economic policy making regimes and agencies Additionally feminists have critiqued male dominated diplomatic establishment and intergovernmental organizations and have proposed alternative theories and practices This text integrates women and gender and feminist analyses into the study of international history in order to produce a broader understanding of processes of international change during the 20th and 21st centuries

Governing in a Global World Maria J. D'Agostino, Marilyn Marks Rubin, 2017-11-28 Governing in a Global World captures the panorama of women governing around the world Even though the modern era marks history s greatest advancements for women worldwide they hold fewer than 30 percent of decision making positions and are often missing from negotiating tables where policies are made and conflicts resolved The opening chapters present trends and context for studying women in public service by focusing on path setters across the globe the status of women in the world s executive and legislative bodies and their participation in public service across several nations Later chapters examine power leadership and representation of women in public service with several chapters looking at women governing from a regional perspective in the Middle East Sub Sahara Africa Latin America and China The final chapter presents empirical evidence that shows how policies to increase women s representation in the public arena reduce gender inequality more than any other policy intervention Taken together the chapters illustrate the worldwide importance of and challenges to promoting gender equality and women governing Participation and Protest Sarah Henderson, Alana S. Jeydel, 2007 Despite increased international rhetoric in support of women s equality women currently comprise a disproportionate share of the world s illiterate poor displaced underpaid underemployed and underrepresented populations And though women have gained visibility and influence in a wide array of political and economic arenas their position and status in society are still far from equal to those of men On the other hand since the post World War II era there has been a global explosion of women s activism on behalf of equality liberation and better living conditions women are standing up not only for themselves but also for other disempowered groups country can afford to be isolated or to ignore the challenges and opportunities presented by international politics. Issues such as climate change, trade agreements, global security threats, and humanitarian crises all require coordinated efforts and cooperation between nations. Ignoring these issues or pursuing short-sighted policies can have dire consequences for a country's future viability. It is therefore crucial for citizens to be well informed about international affairs and to support political leaders who prioritize diplomacy, collaboration, and long-term planning. By voting for candidates and parties that advocate for responsible and forward-thinking policies on the global stage, citizens can play a vital role in shaping their country's future trajectory and ensuring its success in a rapidly changing world. Cities in a Globalizing World

Un-Habitat, 2012-06-25. The world has entered the urban millennium. This historic transition is being further propelled by the powerful forces of globalization. The central challenge for the international community is clear: to make both urbanization and globalization work for all people instead of leaving billions behind or on the margins. Cities in a Globalizing World: Global Report on Human Settlements is a comprehensive review of conditions in the world's cities and the prospects for making them better, safer places to live in an age of globalization.
