Cognition and Extended Rational Choice Howard Margolis, 2007-10-17 This new book by Howard Margolis demonstrates how an account of widely discussed topics from tipping points in social choice to cognitive illusions and experimental anomalies can be brought within a coherent framework Sunspots: Theory and Observations J.H. Thomas, N.O. Weiss, 2012-12-06 This volume contains the invited papers presented at the NATO Advanced Research Workshop on the Theory of Sunspots held in Cambridge England 22-27 September 1991 The idea of holding this Workshop first arose during the Solar Optical Telescope workshop on Theoretical Problems in High Resolution Solar Physics in Munich in 1985 At that meeting separate discussion groups were formed to consider specific topics in solar physics The discussion group on sunspots recommended that there be a meeting devoted to theoretical problems associated with sunspots the motivation being the consensus that theory seemed to lag behind the observational evidence in our quest for a satisfactory understanding of the physics of sunspots This recommendation was warmly received and the two of us were designated to organize the Workshop Although the Workshop eventually took place later than originally envisioned the delay turned out to be fortunate and the timing of the Workshop was ideal for a number of reasons There have been remarkable improvements in high resolution observations of sunspots in the past few years and many important new observational results were presented for the first time at this Workshop by groups working at the Lockheed Palo Alto Research Laboratories the Swedish and German telescopes in the Canary Islands and the VSO National Solar Observatory Vector magnetographs and Stokes polarimetry have at last given us reliable measurements of the vector magnetic fields in sunspots Comparison of Statistical Experiments Erik Torgersen, 1991-03-14 There are a number of important questions associated with statistical experiments when does one given experiment yield more information than another how can we measure the difference in information how fast does information accumulate by repeating the experiment The means of answering such questions has emerged from the work of Wald Blackwell LeCam and others and is based on the ideas of risk and deficiency The present work which is devoted to the various methods of comparing statistical experiments is essentially self contained requiring only some background in measure theory and functional analysis Chapters introducing statistical experiments and the necessary convex analysis begin the book and are followed by others on game theory decision theory and vector lattices The notion of deficiency which measures the difference in information between two experiments is then introduced The relation between it and other concepts such as sufficiency randomisation distance ordering equivalence completeness and convergence are explored This is a comprehensive treatment of the subject and will be an essential reference for mathematical statisticians
