Background: Many studies have shown that the use of a structured approach to patient assessment, such as the ABCDE approach, can improve the quality of patient care. However, the use of a structured approach to patient assessment is not always consistent across different healthcare settings. This study aims to evaluate the effectiveness of a structured approach to patient assessment in a general practice setting.

These graphs are constructed by following the same steps as the previous ones, but in this case, the number of iterations is 1000. The results are shown in Figure 10. The graphs show that the number of iterations required to reach the minimum value is significantly higher than in the previous cases, indicating that the algorithm is less efficient in this scenario.
