

Diesel distributor fuel-injection pumps VE

The reasons behind the diesel-powered vehicle's continuing success can be reduced to one common denominator: Diesels use considerably less fuel than their gasoline-powered counterparts. And in the meantime the diesel has practically caught up with the gasoline engine when it comes to starting and running refinement. Regarding exhaust-gas emissions, the diesel engine is just as good as a gasoline engine with catalytic converter. In some cases, it is even better. The diesel engine's emissions of CO₂, which is responsible for the "green-house effect", are also lower than for the gasoline engine, although this is a direct result of the diesel engine's better fuel economy. It was also possible during the past few years to considerably lower the particulate emissions which are typical for the diesel engine.

The popularity of the high-speed diesel engine in the passenger car though, would have been impossible without the diesel fuel-injection systems from Bosch. The very high level of precision inherent in the distributor pump means that it is possible to precisely meter extremely small injection quantities to the engine. And thanks to the special governor installed with the VE-pump in passenger-car applications, the engine responds immediately to even the finest change in accelerator-pedal setting. All points which contribute to the sophisticated handling qualities of a modern-day automobile.

The Electronic Diesel Control (EDC) also plays a decisive role in the overall improvement of the diesel-engined passenger car.

The following pages will deal with the design and construction of the VE distributor pump, and how it adapts injected fuel quantity, start-of-injection, and duration of injection to the different engine operating conditions.
