Council says

Residents to have say on building

Recalling complaints that a previous design did not take public opinion into consideration, members of the City Council voted Wednesday night that the public will have a say in designing a proposed municipal building.

A citizens' committee will be appointed by the council soon to provide the public input lacking in the design which was defeated in the April bond election.

Concern for public opinion in the design has been a key factor each time the council has discussed the project, but Monday night's meeting has taken some a step closer to the first reading of an ordinance authorizing the city manager to contract for architectural services based on a unanimous vote vote.

In response to questions from the council, City Manager Tom Hart explained that the contract will provide the necessary plans and cost estimates on which to base a bond election. He noted that the city would be liable for the services only if the bond issue passes. Failure of the bond program would void the contract, thus costing the city nothing.

Should the bond issue pass, the architect's fee will range between $17,500 and $33,500, plus the cost of any additional consultants required. The fee would then be paid from bond funds, as a part of the total bond figure.

Proposing a tight time table for putting the proposal together, Hart expressed hope that a citizens' committee could be appointed and begin functioning within "the next couple of weeks." He added that applications from residents willing to serve on the committee are being accepted, but the appointments must be made soon.

In other action, the council learned additional details of the proposed middle school. Hart and Councilman Chris Feltus reported on a joint meeting between Lawrenceville Independent School District officials, the city, and Fox & Jacobs. According to the report, LISD has proposed use of land near Peters Colony Elementary School, which is presently dedicated to park use. The LISD plan calls for purchase of the land from Fox & Jacobs, Inc., then a cooperative agreement under which the remaining park land would be developed by the city. The school would utilize city athletic facilities and maintain them in return.

Feltus noted that the meeting was "highly productive, and the school board has expressed an they are deeply concerned over the schools in the Colony and are determined to meet our needs."

Some concern was voiced over the loss of park land and associated grant funds, but Fox & Jacobs has told LISD they will reimburse the city approximately $20,000 to compensate for the loss in grant money.

Rabies vaccinations planned

The City of The Colony Animal Control Department will hold another rabies vaccination clinic from 9 a.m. until noon on Oct. 27.

The clinic will be held at City Hall and will give residents an opportunity to have pets vaccinated against rabies and register them with the city.

The clinic is for rabies vaccinations only. The charge will be $4 for the vaccination and $3 for city registration.

These darn decisions!

The Colony's city government took on a youthful look Friday as 12 fourth and fifth grade students from Camery and Peters Colony schools assumed the roles of key city officials. The students wrote winning essays on "The Colony of the Future" and were rewarded with the opportunity to be a part of the government for a day. Mayor John Schmidt, Camery, (center) and councilmen Michelle Vachonis, Peters Colony, Jeff Mahoney, Camery, Thomas Gorynski and Chris Tait, Peters Colony, are shown considering a bicycle ordinance. In photo below, City Manager Mark Hunt of Peters Colony School reflects on the responsibilities of his office after the City Council meeting. More photos on Page 8.

Advisory group to be appointed

The City Council has requested interested residents to write on a committee to provide a degree of taxpayer liaison with the architect during the planning stages of the proposed municipal building.

City Manager Tom Hart expects the committee to be appointed and functioning within the next two weeks, and he noted that little time remains for filing applications. Volunteers should apply at City Hall.

Baptists to use new structure

Oct. 28 will be a big day for members of the Colony Baptist Church. That's the day they will begin holding Sunday School classes in the new Educational Building.

Rev. Bill Smiley, pastor, said the goal is to have 345 persons attending classes Oct. 28. When construction begins in January there were about 250 members in the congregation.

The $200,000 two-story building has a capacity of 400 persons.

Portable potties to be tried

Soccer and softball players and fans may find the Colony fields more pleasant after Nov. 1. At the request of the city Parks and Recreation Board portable toilets will be installed at the field on a trial basis.

If the results are satisfactory the service will be continued in the spring sports season.
