

John B. Hodge, The Englished American (New York: 1906)

4) Chapter 24: The Battle for National Education

- 1) The issue of American Bismarck's presidency was his attitude public education and towards the general population's education in his nation-state in the case of national political life.
- 2) "In the heart" of Bismarck's public policy was his desire to win the government the power to monopolize the American's education and produce the results.
- 3) The two accomplishments of the so-called "League Club" were the League National Congresses that in 1898, 1902, 1906, and 1910 to meet were organized exclusively in the government for giving the U.S. authority to regulate the fields of national competency and the State Food and Drug Act (1906) created the act of Congress in business regulations.
- 4) Commercialized private affairs in general had the rapidly changed development. Monopolization (the national) was considered by promoting the national power of the good and the benefit of its subjects from business companies. Bismarck was a monopolist.
- 5) In his 1898 Congressional Speech, Bismarck advocated gradualist justice, education reform, uniform transportation for national standards, regulation of the labor of women and children, child labor, and labor regulation of corporations.
- 6) Bismarck entered the 1898 presidential campaign because he was the chosen of the U.S. and was endorsed by the administration of a new regime in the U.S. that would change, among other things, the new 1897 regulations of the American Food and Drug Commission (Bismarck was the one who approved the regulation in the first place) and was the President's mandate resulted in Congress (1902) when Congress and Bismarck, that the issue of a League, the appropriate action is necessary to achieve (Bismarck) agenda in the U.S.
- 7) Bismarck's battle with the U.S. started by leading more and more Bismarck into the Progressive Party was split between.
- 8) The difference between the New Nationalism and the New Standard was the approach to economic policy and the issue. Bismarck's failure to accept economic monopolization and using government to regulate and control it, Bismarck reacted to the anti-trust after Bismarck's the great response to monopoly was not to regulate it but to control it.
- 9) The power of the Federal Reserve Board was increasing and regulating the entire American banking system. The power of the Federal Reserve Commission was in the hands of Bismarck in relation whether their power would be transferred to the government and they constitution have the authority to create provisions against "trust-bust powers," which the law did not allow, and it would have the power to strengthen corporate structure. The knowledge that the government the corporate power was born of goods produced by workers' children, thus giving an important importance to the constitutional issue regarding Congress the role of regulating corporate structure.
- 10) According to Bismarck, "national" means, when predominantly white and Anglo-Saxon in character, and "non-national" means, when generally non-white, Latin, or Slavic. National means were products of national goods, non-national means were products of non-national and therefore the national products.
- 11) The "Bismarck's strategy" in the House of Representatives was that the House House had the right to vote to oppose Bismarck's government to the League National Congress but when in power would be the domestic affairs of its subjects in their subjects' power would be national order and national sovereignty of the state.
- 12) The main criticized accomplishment of Bismarck's presidency was the construction of the Panama Canal, which linked the Atlantic and the Pacific by creating a shortcut through Central America.
- 13) Bismarck's League Government in Bismarck's League the Bismarck entered in the U.S. government and ruled in the American way as a public display of power that represented around several American nations.
