The T-Cell Receptors Tak W. Mak, 2012-12-06 The importance of thymus dependent cells or T cells in the generation of a successful immune response was first realized in the early sixties In the following two decades a succession of elegant experiments established the antigen specificity of T cells and their ability to perform both as regulatory and effector cells T cells were shown to be essential in most immune reactions playing a crucial role in augmenting the activity of effector T and B cells against foreign antigen as well as in the suppression of effector activity against self antigens The means by which T cells differentiate foreign from self antigens is based on their recognition of antigen almost exclusively in the context of self major histocompatibility complex products unlike B cells which recognize an antigen alone It is this recognition mediated by the T cell receptor that sets into motion the diverse cell cell interactions which control the differentiation and regulation of the immune response Although its importance was well established the molecular nature of the T cell receptor remained elusive for two decades Many hypotheses as to its structure and precise function were put forward using immunoglobulin as a basis for conjecture but the Holy Grail of Immunology remained ephemeral until three years ago In the ensuing years both immunologists and molecular biologists have contributed to an explosion of data unsurpassed by any previous period in the field T Cell Receptors Owen Simpson Bell,1995 T cell receptors is a comprehensive treatise on the T cell receptor It deals with the TCR protein its functional interactions with the signal transduction machinery of the T cell and with the structure and organization of the TCR genes It is the only comprehensive volume on the TCR and is written by leaders in the field Particularly useful is the tabulation and nomenclature of the TCR alpha and beta variable regions and the inclusion of a plate section showing the alignments of these sequences BOOK JACKET Title Summary field provided by Blackwell North America Inc All Rights Reserved The Human T-cell Receptor Repertoire and Transplantation Peter J. The Antigen T Cell Receptor ,1997-01-01 The T Cell Receptor Carsten Geisler,1995 Zsfassung in d n Sprache T-cell Receptor Diversity of Various Antigen-specific T Cells Benjamin Alan Tjoa,1994 T cells recognize foreign antigen through a heterodimeric alphabeta T cell receptor TCR The TCR ligand is a peptide bound to a membrane bound protein coded by the major histocompatibility complex MHC locus Like immunoglobulins the TCR repertoire is diverse because both the alpha and beta chains are coded by multiple genes that undergo rearrangement The general goal of this study was to determine the diversity of TCRs from specific T cell populations including T cells that are reactive with multiple ligands and TCRs that are reactive with a single peptide MHC protein complex The first part of this thesis describes the analysis of TCR structures used by T cells that mediate rejection in tissue transplantations These T cells recognize foreign MHC proteins and because MHC proteins can each bind a variety of endogenous peptides the T cells recognize multiple ligands i e different peptide MHC complexes To generate T cells involved in transplant rejection mice were injected at least two times hyperimmunized with cells that bear foreign MHC proteins and the transplant reactive T cells were further enriched in culture Transcripts of the alpha chains from these T cells were amplified using the polymerase chain reaction and sequenced Results from this study showed that 1 unlike immunoglobulin genes somatic mutations did not occur in TCR genes from hyperimmune animals and 2 TCR transcripts from hyperimmune T cells specific for foreign MHC were diverse in sequence However after a long period 40 days in culture dominant clones expressing particular TCR structures were found If the long term hyperimmune culture is indicative of the repertoire of cells that mediate transplant rejection then such predominant TCR structures could serve as targets for specific suppression of transplant rejection The second part of this thesis describes the sequence analysis of TCR that are specific for a single peptide MHC protein complex The peptide involved in this study p2Ca is a ubiquitously expressed self peptide that binds to an MHC protein called L sp rm d Results showed that 1 T cells that are specific for the p2Ca L sp rm d complex can be readily generated in vitro and 2 the T cells express a diverse TCR repertoire although restrictions in the use of V beta and J beta regions were observed The predominant use of particular V beta and J beta regions are discussed in the context of a model for the interaction between the alphabeta TCR and the p2Ca L sp rm d complex These findings are also discussed with regard to the potential for targeting autoimmune T cells and for peptide based therapies that involve T cell mediated tumor rejection
