Work Family And Faith Rural Southern Women In The Twentieth Century:

Work, Family, and Faith Melissa Walker, Rebecca Sharpless, 2006 At the beginning of the twentieth century the majority of rural southerners were dependent on agriculture and eked out a living as tenants on land owned by someone else Women took on multiple duties from child rearing to labor in the fields to help meet their own goals of independence well being and family persistence on the land Over the course of the century however women found their lives and their work transformed Government intervention the Great Depression and industrial job opportunities created by the two world wars and the development of Sun Belt industries lured or pushed tens of thousands of black and white rural southerners off the land As the American South changed around them becoming more urban and industrialized some women struggled to help their families survive in the increasingly large scale and commercial agricultural economy while other women eagerly seized opportunities to engage in rural reform get better educations and work at off farm jobs Whether they moved to the cities or stayed on the farms most of these women continued to struggle against poverty and relied on tradition and inner strength to get by This well researched sharply focused and keenly insightful collection of essays takes readers across the twentieth century South from rural roadside stands to tobacco fields to Sloss Sheffield Steel s Sloss Quarters in Birmingham Covering the full scope of southern rural women s varied lives this book will be of particular value to anyone interested in sociology women s studies or southern history

The Proof Is in the Dough Kathryn L. Beasley, 2025-01-15 The Proof Is in the Dough examines how rural white and African American women in Alabama and Florida used the Cooperative Extension Service s home demonstration programming between 1914 and 1929 as a means to earn extra income Kathryn L Beasley explores an area of rural women s history that has not been closely examined that is how rural American women involved with home demonstration used the skills they learned as a way to better themselves economically Furthermore Beasley traces how this extra income allowed these women to shape their own producing and consuming habits While most home demonstration programming during the Progressive Era and 1920s focused on ways to save money among other objectives rural women in Alabama and Florida used different strategies to earn more money and gain some economic independence Beasley s research shows how Alabama and Florida s rural women exercised their own determination and resourcefulness to create ways to economically sustain themselves by using food tangible items handicrafts small businesses and more to their advantage However while there were similarities in how these rural women earned extra money the states in which they lived differed in important agricultural ways Florida offered a wider variety of growing and environmental seasons and as a result a larger diversity of crops By taking a comparative approach both Florida versus Alabama and Black versus white Beasley details the unique and innovative ways that rural southern women applied their considerable agricultural and domestic skills to improve their lives and the lives of their families In so doing she also reveals how disposable income helped establish ideas of empowerment and financial independence in the years before the economic struggles of the 1930s

Pain and Pleasure in Southern Cookbooks author Carrie Helms Tippen attempts to understand the unique rhetorical situation of the southern cookbook as it negotiates a tension between the expectations of the genre and the prevailing metanarratives of the southern experience one focused on pleasure and the other rooted in pain Through an analysis of commercially published southern cookbooks from the 1990s to the present Tippen examines the range of rhetorical purposes and strategies writers have employed some of which undermine the reality of a painful past and cause harm or violence and others which serve as tools for truth and reconciliation
