Stephenson, 2017-11-18 Excerpt from Cutting and Draping A Practical Handbook for Upholsterers and Decorators The nature of this treatment is to disguise the piano and give it the effect and usefulness of another piece of furniture Figure 28 illustrates a popular treatment the back covered with a curtain of soft fabric Shirred on a rod and attached to the back of the instrument so that the heading or shirring projects slightly above the top In making the curtain allow about as much again for fullness or twice the length of the space to be covered letting the bottom edge of the curtain hang free or shirr it on a rod similar to the top To this is added an upholstered seat or bench and a few pillows If desired a festoon drapery can be added at the top of the curtain with good effect A decorative panel may be used instead of a curtain as illustrated in Figure 29 either with or without a seat and the drapery made to conform to the style of the panel The drapery may be made as a part of the panel as Figure 29 A or attached separately after the panel is in place A square or grand piano is prettily treated with a at cover the size and shape of the top trimmed with an overhanging fringe or applique edge Of a depth to suit the individual taste The cover may be made of any medium weight material of self or composite colorings but preference should be given to a fabric not easily marked by the ornaments or bric a brac In many cases the designs suitable for an upright piano can be used with good effect on a mantel Figures 23 24 25 and 27 of our illustrations possessing this feature to a certain degree The decoration of a mantel however does not present the same difficulties as the decoration of a piano because there are fewer restrictions to bear in mind and there is perhaps more danger of overdoing mantel decoration on this account From the appearance of some of the old fashioned fireplaces still in existence we would infer that in those days utility and capacity were the first last and only considerations About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works Upholstery Desmond Gaston, 1993-01 A comprehensive handbook of traditional techniques written by craftsmen Occupations Handbook , 2000
