

DIODE CLAMPING CIRCUITS

AIM: Testing of clamping circuits: positive /negative clamping.

COMPONENTS REQUIRED:

Sl.No	Component	Range	Quantity
1	Resistor	100K	1
2	Diode	1N4001	2
3	Capacitor	1 μ F	1
4	DC variable Power supply	(0-30) V	1
5	DSO	-	1
6	Function Generator	-	1
7	Connecting Wires	-	1 set

Theory:

Clamper is a circuit that clamps a signal to a different DC level without changing the shape of the applied signal. Clamping circuit introduces a DC level into an ac signal. The different types of clampers are positive, negative and biased clampers. A clamping network must have a capacitor, a diode and a load resistor. The magnitude R and C must be chosen such that time constant RC is large enough to ensure that the voltage across the capacitor does not discharge significantly during the interval when the diode is non conducting. By connecting suitable Dc voltage in series with the diode, clamping level can be varied.

The clamper with a positive DC shift is called positive clamper (Negative peak clamper) and a clamper with a negative DC shift is called negative clamper (Positive peak clamper).

Positive Peak Clamper: This pushes down the DC the positive peak of the input signal to level above or below the reference level depending upon the DC offset voltage.

Negative Peak Clamper: This pushes down the DC the negative peak of the input signal to level above or below the reference level depending upon the DC offset voltage.

Design:

Assume C, and for the clamping to occur select R such that $RC \gg T$, where T is the period of the input signal.

$RC \gg T$; Assume $T = 2\text{ms}$, let $RC = 50T = 100\text{ms}$

Let $R = 100\text{K}$

$\therefore C = 1\mu\text{F}$
