Ukrainian Russian and France French thereby highlighting that TS as a discipline is not a monolith but consists of various histories interconnected with each other Towards a Feminist Translator Studies Helen Vassallo, 2022-10-17 This pioneering work advocates for a shift toward inclusivity in the UK translated literature landscape investigating and challenging unconscious bias around women in translation and building on existing research highlighting the role of translators as activists and agents and the possibilities for these new theoretical models to contribute to meaningful industry change The book sets out the context for the new subdiscipline of feminist translator studies positing this as an essential mechanism to work towards diversity in the translated literature sector of the publishing industry In a series of five case studies that each exemplify a key component of the feminist translator studies toolkit Vassallo draws on exclusive interviews with a range of activist translators and publishers setting these in dialogue with contemporary perspectives on feminism and translation to propose a new agent based model of feminist translation practice In synthesising these perspectives Vassallo makes a powerful argument for questioning existing structures in the translated literature publishing system which perpetuate bias and connects these conversations to wider social movements towards promoting demonstrable change in the industry This book will be a valuable resource for students and scholars of translation studies and publishing as well as for the various agents involved in promoting translated literature in the UK and beyond Translation Review ,1997

Women and Early Modern Cultures of Translation Hilary Brown, 2022 Women and Early Modern Cultures of Translation Beyond the Female Tradition is a major new intervention in research on early modern translation and will be an essential point of reference for anyone interested in the history of women translators Research on women translators has often focused on early modern England the example of early modern England has been taken as the norm for the rest of the continent and has shaped research on gender and translation more generally This book brings a new European perspective to the field by introducing the case of Germany It draws attention to forty women who can be identified as translators in sixteenth and seventeenth century Germany and shows how their work does not fit easily into traditional narratives about marginalization and subversiveness The study uses the example of Germany to argue against reading the work of translating women primarily through the lens of gender and to challenge claims about the existence of a female translation tradition which transcends the boundaries of time and place Broadening our perspective to include Germany provides a more nuanced and informed account of the position of women within European translation cultures and forces us to rethink gender as a category of analysis in translation history The book makes the case for a new woman interrogated approach to translation history to borrow a concept from Carol Maier and as such it will provide a blueprint for future work in the area Provided by publisher Translation Perspectives: 1986-87 Marilyn Gaddis Rose, 1988 Feminist Translation Studies Olga Castro, Emek Ergun, 2017-02-17 Feminist Translation Studies Local and Transnational Perspectives situates feminist translation as political activism Chapters highlight the multiple agendas and visions of feminist translation and the different political voices and cultural heritages through which it speaks across times and places addressing the question of how both literary and nonliterary discourses migrate and contribute to local and transnational processes of feminist knowledge building and political activism This collection does not pursue a narrow fixed definition of feminism that is based solely on Eurocentric or West centric gender politics rather Feminist Translation Studies Local and Transnational Perspectives seeks to expand our understanding of feminist action not only to include feminist translation as resistance against multiple forms of domination but also to rethink feminist translation through feminist theories and practices developed in different geohistorical and disciplinary contexts In so doing the collection expands the geopolitical sociocultural and historical scope of the field from different disciplinary perspectives pointing towards a more transnational interdisciplinary and overtly political conceptualization of translation studies

Translating Feminism in China Zhongli Yu, 2015-06-05 This book explores translation of feminism in China through examining several Chinese translations of two typical feminist works The Second Sex TSS Beauvoir 1949 1952 and The Vagina Monologues TVM Ensler 1998 TSS exposes the cultural construction of woman while TVM reveals the pervasiveness of sexual oppression toward women The female body and female sexuality including lesbian sexuality constitute a challenge to the Chinese translators due to cultural differences and sexuality still being a sensitive topic in China This book investigates from gender and feminist perspectives how TSS and TVM have been translated and received in China with special attention to how the translators meet the challenges Since translation is the gateway to the reception of feminism an examination of the translations should reveal the response to feminism of the translator as the first reader and gatekeeper and how feminism is translated both ideologically and technically in China The translators decisions are discussed within the social historical and political contexts Translating Feminism in China discusses among other issues Feminist Translation Practice Theory and Studies Translating the Female Body and Sexuality Translating Lesbianism Censorship Sexuality and Translation This book will be relevant to postgraduate students and researchers of translation studies It will also interest academics interested in feminism gender studies and Chinese literature and culture Zhongli Yu is Assistant Professor of Translation Studies at the University of Nottingham Ningbo China UNNC

Variability of Linguistic Features of Persian Translations by Translators' Gender Mohammad Javad Moafi, 2020-07-21 Master s Thesis from the year 2010 in the subject Interpreting Translating grade 17 50 language English abstract The purpose of the study was to investigate whether there is a meaningful relationship between translators gender and their translations in terms of such linguistic features as reference conjunction misspelling SL intrusion punctuation verbs and sexually explicit terms For that reason the same sample English text was imparted to both female and male translators to be rendered into Persian to ascertain if they vary linguistically and if they do so what areas are more frequently different The organizational factors rather than pragmatic ones of language namely grammatical as well as textual dimensions were scrutinized in the study The participants were 30 male and 30 female undergraduate senior students of English at three universities in Qom Iran These 60 participants were selected out of 150 students who scored as high as 6 in the IELTS given to them and showed their English proficiency By analyzing the data elicited descriptively from each translation primarily via t test only 6 out of 22 variables demonstrated a significant difference between translations made by both genders contributing to the research Thus although these 6 variables verify the meaningful relationship between translator s gender and translation these elements are not enough to indicate that grammar and discourse of translations are significantly different In addition to raising awareness and developing the scope of translation studies the present study has several implications As a case in point a text with a particular feature may be assigned to a specific gender to be better translated Signs University of Chicago.
