development in particular widespread access to the internet has exposed Indonesian society much more directly than before to global flows of information giving rise to changes stemming in part from sources outside Indonesia but interpreted and shaped according to local conditions and socio cultural practices The meeting of these two vectors one generated internally and the other coming from exposure to global trends is producing a situation of diversity fluidity and change in language use and discursive practice in contemporary Indonesian society While contributors to this volume discuss Indonesian language expression at the national level a particular focus of the collection is on regional local and minority languages where problems associated with decentralization find their counterpart in the role that language plays in the workings of regional and national identity politics
