Trapping Wild Animals in Malay Jungles Charles Mayer,2014-06-18 CONTENTS Circus Days Jungle Stratagems Elephants Shipping Wild Animals The Sea Tragedy Of The Jungle Folk Killing A Man Eater Up A Tree In The Jungle IT was the lure of the circus the tug that every boy feels when a show comes to town that started me on my career as a collector of wild animals I use the word collector rather than hunter because hunting gives the idea of killing and in my business a dead animal is no animal at all In fact the mere hunting of the animals was simply the beginning of my work and the task of capturing them uninjured was far more thrilling than standing at a distance and pulling a trigger And then when animals were safely in the net or stockade came the job of taking them back through the jungle to the port where they could be sold It was often a case of continuous performance until I stood on the dock and saw the boats steam away with the cages aboard And I wasn't too sure of the success of my expedition even then because the animals I had yanked from the jungle might die before they reached their destination I was nearly seventeen when Sells Brothers Circus came to Binghamton New York where I was living with my parents That day I joined some other boys in playing hookey from school and we earned our passes by carrying water for the animals It wasn't my first circus but it was the first time that I had ever worked around the animals and I was fascinated I didn't miss the big show but all the rest of the day I was in the menagerie listening to the yarns of the keepers and doing as much of their work as they would allow That night when the circus left town I stowed away in a wagon In Singapore there was a rich Chinese leper known as Ong Si Chou who asked me repeatedly why I did not bring him some new remedy for his disease Since he had a large household of servants who took care of him and his own carriages and rickshaws when he traveled he was allowed to live untroubled by the authorities but he was very unhappy because he had tried all the remedies of the native doctors and was steadily growing worse At last I told him that I had something that might help He asked me what it was but I would not tell him When he insisted I answered Snakes Ye began to prod the rhinoceros He put his head against the wall and rooted the wall toppled over and he lurched out of the pit and into the cage The native screamed and the snake constricted suddenly breaking nearly every bone in the man's body and crushing the life out of him
