

"Hang on, everybody — we're off on our summer vacation."

Will Dr. Mudd finally be cleared?

By CHRISTOPHER K. MURPHY

For the first time in 10 years, a federal grand jury has returned a verdict in the case of Dr. Mudd. The jury, which heard the case in Houston, Texas, found Dr. Mudd not guilty of the charges against him. The charges were related to the death of a patient, a young woman, who died in 1968. Dr. Mudd had been charged with manslaughter and with covering up the death. The jury's verdict is a significant development in the case, which has been one of the most controversial in the history of the medical profession.

The grand jury's decision is a significant development in the case, which has been one of the most controversial in the history of the medical profession. Dr. Mudd's defense team had argued that the death was a tragic accident and that Dr. Mudd had done everything possible to save the patient. The jury's verdict supports this argument. The case has been a major focus of public attention, and the jury's decision is seen as a vindication of Dr. Mudd.

Houston: Bus or Bust?

By MICHAEL GOODMAN

When it comes to getting from point A to point B in Houston, the choice is often between the bus and the car. The bus is a convenient and affordable mode of transportation, but it can be crowded and slow. The car, on the other hand, offers more freedom and flexibility, but it can be expensive and subject to traffic congestion. The choice between the two modes of transportation is a common one for many Houstonians.

For many Houstonians, the bus is the only viable option. The city's public transportation system is extensive, with routes covering most of the city. The bus is also a good option for those who do not own a car or who do not want to deal with the costs of ownership. However, the bus can be a frustrating experience, especially during rush hour.

On the other hand, the car offers a more comfortable and convenient mode of transportation. It allows you to travel at your own pace and to visit places that are not served by the bus. However, the cost of owning and operating a car can be high, and traffic congestion in Houston can be a major problem.

Ultimately, the choice between the bus and the car depends on your individual circumstances. If you are looking for a cheap and convenient way to get around, the bus might be the best option. If you value your time and comfort, the car might be a better choice. In either case, the choice is a difficult one, and it is one that many Houstonians face every day.
