American Public Opinion, Advocacy, and Policy in Congress Paul Burstein, 2014-01-20

Between one election and the next members of Congress introduce thousands of bills What determines which become law Is it the public Do we have government of the people by the people for the people Or is it those who have the resources to organize and pressure government who get what they want In the first study ever of a random sample of policy proposals Paul Burstein finds that the public can get what it wants but mainly on the few issues that attract its attention Does this mean organized interests get what they want Not necessarily on most issues there is so little political activity that it hardly matters Politics may be less of a battle between the public and organized interests than a struggle for attention American society is so much more complex than it was when the Constitution was written that we may need to reconsider what it means in fact to be a democracy
