

Chapter 2

Methods of Payment in International Trade

To succeed in today's global marketplace and win when export foreign competition, exporters must offer their customers attractive sales terms supported by the appropriate payment methods. Because getting paid is all that we live in the ultimate goal for each export sale, an appropriate payment method must be chosen carefully to minimize the payment risk while also accommodating the needs of the buyer. As shown in the table, Practical Export Shipment Terms and Conditions outlines methods of payment for international transactions. Choosing the best payment method depends on the exporter's credit risk and the importer's creditworthiness.

Exporters should consider an export credit payment method is actually desirable for you and the importer. The credit risk is the risk of not getting paid for the goods shipped. The risk is the risk of not getting paid for the goods shipped. The risk is the risk of not getting paid for the goods shipped.

Export Credit Insurance

Export credit insurance (ECI) provides protection against commercial losses (such as default, insolvency, bankruptcy, reorganization, liquidation, non-acceptance, and currency inconvertibility). ECI also protects against losses due to political risks (such as war, civil unrest, terrorism, and expropriation). ECI also protects against losses due to political risks (such as war, civil unrest, terrorism, and expropriation). ECI also protects against losses due to political risks (such as war, civil unrest, terrorism, and expropriation).

Export Factoring

Factoring is a financial service in the financing of short-term receivables. The exporter transfers title to the short-term receivables to a factoring firm, or a "factor," for sale at a discount from the face value. Factoring allows an exporter to ship on open account in the United States for the limited liability of the factor. The factor handles collection on the receivables, financing losses (and advances) with each export transaction.

Trade Letters of Credit

A trade letter of credit (L/C) acts as an assurance policy issued by the importer's bank in favor of the exporter. It is a bank instrument, meaning that payment will be made if the importer fails to pay to the exporter. The L/C is a written order or promise to pay a certain sum of money to the exporter or to the order of the exporter. It is a written order or promise to pay a certain sum of money to the exporter or to the order of the exporter. It is a written order or promise to pay a certain sum of money to the exporter or to the order of the exporter.

Export Contract

An export contract is a formal contract to sell goods or services to a foreign buyer. The contract is a legal document that sets out the terms and conditions of the sale. It is a legal document that sets out the terms and conditions of the sale. It is a legal document that sets out the terms and conditions of the sale. It is a legal document that sets out the terms and conditions of the sale.

Trade Finance Exchange: A Marketplace for Export-Import Finance

Trading is a method of trade financing that allows the exporter to sell their receivables and long-term receivables to a bank or a financial institution. The bank or financial institution then sells the receivables to the exporter.
