

"Not for the first time do I wish darkly that children can be grown in a bowl on the mantelpiece, like sea-monkeys ..."

When feisty, forthright radio personality Sam Cowen decides the time has come to procreate, it simply doesn't occur to her that she won't be able to handle the project with her quintessential sense of humour intact. But when she finds herself at the movies throwing up into her box of popcorn, Sam begins to suspect that this pregnancy is not going to happen in aqueous cream-scented soft-focus.

Once she's grown accustomed to tossing her cookies in public, Sam sets out to prepare for the birth of her son. Surrounded by a coterie of supportive and disturbingly efficient 'yummy mummy' pals, an extremely patient husband and her delightfully batty mum, Sam runs (OK, waddles) the gauntlet of pregnancy: dealing with fascist doctors' receptionists, finding baby paraphernalia that doesn't cost the equivalent of Bolivia's national debt, choosing a name without destabilising sensitive family politics and watching insufferable Swedish breastfeeding videos (all this while looking like she's swallowed a Weber braai). And she hasn't even done the giving birth part yet!

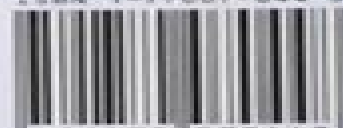

Sam and her sense of humour survive the experience to come out in full force in a frank journal of pregnancy and childbirth that will have you in stitches. Figuratively speaking, of course.

"This is for anyone who's ever wanted a baby, whose wife has ever wanted a baby, who knows someone who wants a baby or has watched a television program about someone who wants a baby. It's funny, it's scary and it's special. And once it's happened to you, life will never be the same again."

Christopher's Story Julie Telfer,2011-06-01 From beginning to end this book kept me riveted and on an emotional rollercoaster Julie brings Kanner's Autism sharply into focus with all the trials and tribulations the family have experienced Everyone will take something special away with them from this excellent and informative book

Rev Jan McDonald Mental Health Care Chaplain Description Christopher's Story was written for my son in the hope of raising awareness of Kanner's autism and severe challenging behaviour It is primarily a story of love and of a determination to remain together as a family when the only alternative offered was residential care The book details our fight to secure schooling accommodation and social services support the later issue has yet to be resolved I would truly love others to look beyond the disability and see Christopher for who he really is I hope this book goes some way towards making this a reality
