

The background of the book cover is a vibrant, detailed illustration of an underwater coral reef. In the upper left, a sea turtle swims towards the right, with its internal organs, including a large, reddish, sac-like stomach, visible through a transparent section of its shell. In the center, a shark swims towards the right, also with its internal organs, including a large, pinkish, sac-like stomach, visible through a transparent section of its body. In the upper right, a manta ray swims towards the left, with its internal organs, including a large, reddish, sac-like stomach, visible through a transparent section of its body. In the lower left, a horseshoe crab is shown on the reef, with its internal organs, including a large, reddish, sac-like stomach, visible through a transparent section of its body. The reef itself is composed of various colorful corals, including purple, pink, and orange varieties, and is populated by other marine life such as a jellyfish, a starfish, and a sea urchin. The water is a deep blue color.
