Forests, Water and People in the Humid Tropics M. Bonell,L. A. Bruijnzeel,2004 Forests Water and People in the Humid Tropics is the most comprehensive review available of the hydrological and physiological functioning of tropical rain forests the environmental impacts of their disturbance and conversion to other land uses and optimum strategies for managing them The book brings together leading specialists in such diverse fields as tropical anthropology and human geography environmental economics climatology and meteorology hydrology geomorphology plant and aquatic ecology forestry and conservation agronomy The editors have supplemented the individual contributions with invaluable overviews of the main sections and provide key pointers for future research

Specialists will find authenticated detail in chapters written by experts on a whole range of people water land use issues managers and practitioners will learn more about the implications of ongoing and planned forest conversion while scientists and students will appreciate a unique review of the literature Pilot Analysis of Global Ecosystems Robin P.

White, Siobhan Murray, Mark Rohweder, 2000 The PAGE Grassland Ecosystems focuses on a selected set of grassland goods and services food forage and livestock biodiversity carbon storage and tourism and recreation Each good or service is discussed in terms of its current status and modifications that have altered its condition such as cultivation urbanization fire livestock grazing and introduction of invasive species Results show that although the major goods and services provided by grasslands are in good to fair condition the capacity for grassland ecosystems to continue to provide these goods and services is declining There have been unambiguous declines in the extent of grasslands especially in the temperate zones of North America and Europe where these ecosystems have been cultivated or urbanized Indicators of soil condition show that more than half of the grasslands in the study have some degree of soil degradation over 5 percent of these grasslands are strongly to extremely degraded Indicators of grassland biodiversity show marked declines in grassland birds of North America with negative effects from fragmentation and non native species suggested for this region and others Although the carbon storage potential for grasslands is large degraded areas store less carbon and there is heavy burning of some grassland areas especially the African savannas Tourism and recreational activities in grasslands appear to make important economic contributions to some countries with revenues generally increasing Overuse of some areas and declines in wildlife populations however suggest possible declines in the capacity to continue to provide these services Journal of
