US-Guatemala Remittance Corridor, 2006-01-01 This study gives an overview of the intermediation of worker remittance flows from the United States to Guatemala In contrast to other remittance corridors in the world most transfers in this corridor are channeled in the United States through the formal sector and distributed in Guatemala through the banking system However both senders and receivers have little access to financial products and services This study argues that in a country characterized by high income inequality and low and concentrated access to credit the large role played by domestic banks in distributing remittances seems promising in terms of creating a point of contact that could lead to cross sales of other financial services The report also argues that authorities have an important coordination and catalytic role to play for increased efficiency in remittance intermediation fostering competition and ultimately highlighting the potential for greater access The report concludes with specific avenues for further policy action in terms of transparency regulatory environment financial literacy and access risk

The Malaysia-Indonesia Remittance Corridor ,2008-01-01 In Malaysia Indonesian migrants are showing an increasingly clear preference for informal transfer mechanisms compared to their counterparts in other countries A little less than half of all Indonesian migrants overseas thought to be around 2 million are working in Malaysia An increasing number of migrants are women and the corridor is also marked by a high number of undocumented migrants Despite the increasing flows of migrants only about 10 percent of the estimated flow of remittances into Indonesia from Malaysia is transferred through the formal system The extent of the preference fo
