

Forests and Trees of the United States

The United States has about 337 million acres of forest land. The hardwood, paper and other forest products come from all parts of it. These wooded areas, called commercial forests, are distributed in six very general commercial regions. The regions are: the Northeast, the North Central, the West Central, the South Central, the Southeast, and the Pacific Northwest. Each region has its own special types of trees and forest products. The map shows the general distribution of the commercial forests and in each of the six regions.

Forest products are very many. The wood-using industries in the United States depend on the forest for a great part of their raw materials.
