Theories Of The Bargaining Process:

Theories of the Bargaining Process Alan Coddington, 1966 A tour de force of theoretical reasoning this book presents the most advanced analytical model of the bargaining process so far conceived Focused essentially on the dynamics of the bargaining process Coddington's model employs elements of several conceptual constructs individual decision making theories of expectations and their adjustment and environment concepts to explain the nature of consistency in a bargainer's system of expectations and intentions The book begins with a description of the bargaining process in an economic context and establishes an analytical framework There follows a critical survey of bargaining theory in which the author selects those concepts which he finds most valid and most applicable to his decision making expectation adjustment model The internal consistency of a wide class of bargaining models is then examined in a chapter on the relationship between decision making and expectations Since the theory of games has been used as a basis for bargaining process theory the author devotes a chapter to an examination of the game theoretic approach and an assessment of its value relative to his own approach The author concludes with a study of the specific capabilities of his own analytical model with discussion of the possible combinations of assumptions with which the investigator may work Although stemming from a problem in economic theory and of immediate interest to economists the book's contribution to the general theory of conflict process and interdependent decision making make it an important study for students of politics and international affairs as well as management and labor relations specialists Alan Coddington received his Ph D from the University of York where the research for this book was conducted He is lecturer in economics Queen Mary College London and is co author of The Elementary Ideas of Game Theory G L S Shackle 1903 1992 was Brunner Professor of Economic Science at the University of Liverpool and was widely known for a succession of major contributions to economic studies including Expectation in Economics Economics for Pleasure A Scheme of Economic Theory and The Years of High Theory Theories of the Bargaining Process Alan Coddington, 2017-07-05 A tour de force of theoretical reasoning this book presents the most advanced analytical model of the bargaining process so far conceived Focused essentially on the dynamics of the bargaining process Coddington's model employs elements of several conceptual constructs individual decision making theories of expectations and their adjustment and environment concepts to explain the nature of consistency in a bargainer's system of expectations and intentions The book begins with a description of the bargaining process in an economic context and establishes an analytical framework There follows a critical survey of bargaining theory in which the author selects those concepts which he finds most valid and most applicable to his decision making expectation adjustment model The internal consistency of a wide class of bargaining models is then examined in a chapter on the relationship between decision making and expectations Since the theory of games has been used as a basis for bargaining process theory the author devotes a chapter to an examination of the game theoretic approach and an assessment of its value relative to his own approach The author concludes with a study of the specific capabilities of his own analytical model with discussion of the possible combinations of assumptions with which the investigator may work. Although stemming from a problem in economic theory and of immediate intent to economists, the book's contribution to the general theory of conflict process and interdependent decision making make it an important study for students of politics and international affairs as well as management and labor relations specialists.

The Negotiation Process I. William Zartman, 1978-10. From the John Holmes Library collection. Theories of the Bargaining Process Dennis Bernard Amos, 1970. A Behavioral Theory of Labor Negotiations Richard E. Walton, Robert B. McKersie, 1991. In this book Walton and McKersie attempt to describe a comprehensive theory of labor negotiation. The authors abstract and analyze four sets of systems of activities which they believe account for much of the behavior found in labor negotiations. The first system of activities termed distributive bargaining comprises competitive behaviors that are intended to influence the division of limited resources. The second system is made up of activities that increase the joint gain available to the negotiating parties referred to as integrative bargaining. They are problem solving behaviors and other activities which identify, enlarge, and act upon the common interests of the parties. The third system includes activities that influence the attitudes of the parties toward each other and affect the basic relationship bonds between the social units involved. This process is referred to as attitudinal structuring. The fourth system of activities which occurs as an integral aspect of the inter party negotiations comprises the behaviors of a negotiator that are meant to achieve consensus within one's own organizations. This fourth process is called intra organizational bargaining. Each sub process has its own set of instrumental acts or tactics. Therefore each of the four model chapters is followed by a chapter on the tactics which implement the process. These chapters translate the model into tactical assignments and include an abundance of supporting illustrations from actual negotiations. This study should be of interest to several audiences including students and teachers of industrial relations, social scientists interested in the general field of conflict resolution as well as practitioners of collective bargaining and other individuals directly involved in international negotiations. The overall theoretical framework has been derived by a mixture of inductive and deductive reasoning. Extensive fieldwork and several dozen printed case studies have provided the bulk of the empirical data. In terms of meaning, the study has three touchstones: the field of collective bargaining, the field of conflict resolutions, and the underlying disciplines of economics, psychology, and sociology.

Theories of the bargaining process Abós Codeminas (Eduardo), 1968. Political Bargaining Gideon Doron, Itai Sened, 2001-03-28. This book brings an exciting and innovative new approach to the study of politics today. It introduces political bargaining, a process at the heart of all political and economic exchanges in contemporary society and the very essence of politics itself, to provide a new framework and fresh insights to modern political science. The authors trace the prevalence of bargaining processes in politics from the abstract level of individual human interaction and the state of nature to the more concrete political or institutionalized level. They introduce students to theory, the basic models of game theory, rational choice theory, and positivist approaches; practice the practical manifestations of political behavior. Theories of the Bargaining Process. With a Foreword by G.L.S. Shackle Alan Coddington, 1978 Theories of the Bargaining Process Alan Coddington, 1968 Bargaining Oran R. Young, 1975 In a volume which covers forty years of work on bargaining and negotiation and includes twenty two contributions by the most prominent authors in the field such as Frederik Zeuthen's theories of the early 1930s and Daniel Ellsberg's theory of the Reluctant Dualist Oran Young evaluates all of the most important deductive models in the field demonstrating their relevance for a wide range of political social and economic contexts and emphasizing their ultimate application to real world situations Concerned with the potential of bargaining models as descriptive or positive theory in contrast to prescriptive theory Young views all of the theories as analytic techniques for coping with the problems associated with strategic interaction He provides analytic and interpretative introductions to each of the book's four parts game theoretic models of bargaining economic models of bargaining prospects for a unified theory and manipulative models of bargaining He also furnishes a general introduction and conclusion Bargaining is common in a great many sociopolitical relationships from the interactions of the members of family units to the interactions of nation states Because of this widespread occurrence there is a need for theoretical work on bargaining by students of all of the social sciences In collecting and presenting the most important writings in the field evaluating the prospects for further theoretical work and clarifying several conceptual problems which commonly arise in analyses of bargaining Young's book attempts to encourage this needed research No advanced knowledge of mathematics is required to understand the essays though a general familiarity with some of the principal techniques utilized in game theoretic and economic models is useful Publisher's description p 2 of dust jacket Negotiation Wynand D. Pienaar, H. I. J. Spoelstra, 1999 Bargaining Theory Ingolf Ståhl, 1972 Advances In Negotiation Theory Carlo Carraro, 2005 Abstract Bargaining is ubiquitous in real life It is a major dimension of political and business activities It appears at the international level when governments negotiate on matters ranging from economic issues such as the removal of trade barriers to global security such as fighting against terrorism to environmental and related issues such as climate change control What factors determine the outcomes of such negotiations What strategies can help reach an agreement How should the parties involved divide the gains from cooperation With whom will one make alliances The authors address these questions by focusing on a noncooperative approach to negotiations which is particularly relevant for the study of international negotiations By reviewing noncooperative bargaining theory noncooperative coalition theory and the theory of fair division they try to identify the connections among these different facets of the same problem in an attempt to facilitate progress toward a unified framework Theories of Coalition Formation James P. Kahan, Amnon Rapoport, 2014-04-04 First published in 1984 In this book the authors set forth the central ideas and results of the major theories of coalition forming behavior These theories address situations of partial conflict of interest with the following aspects 1 there are three or more players 2 players may openly communicate with each other and 3 players form coalitions by freely negotiating agreements on how to disburse the gains that result from the coalition members joint coordinated efforts These models arise from the two disciplines of mathematics in the theory of cooperative n person games with side payments and social psychology in theories of small group behavior in mixed motive situations The goal is to explore the various solution concepts that make up this body of theory and in particular to examine the psychological premises that underlie the various theoretical models A

Theory of the Bargaining Process John G. Cross,1964 Negotiation Processes: Modeling Frameworks and Information Technology Melvin Shakun,2012-12-06 This book focuses on negotiation processes and how negotiation modeling frameworks and information technology can support these A modeling framework for negotiation as a purposeful complex adaptive process is presented and computer implemented in the first three chapters Two game theoretic contributions use non cooperative games in extensive form and a computer implemented graph model for conflict resolution respectively Two chapters use the negotiators joint utility distribution to provide problem structure and computer support A chapter on cognitive support uses restructurable modeling as a framework One chapter matches information technologies with negotiation tasks Another develops computer support based on preference programming Two final chapters develop a stakeholder approach to support system evaluation and a research framework for them respectively Negotiation Processes Modeling Frameworks and Information Technology will be of interest to researchers and students in the areas of negotiation group decision negotiation support systems and management science as well as to practising negotiators interested in this technology
