The Widows Handbook Poetic Reflections On Grief And Survival Literature And Medicine:

The Widows' Handbook Jacqueline Lapidus, Lise Menn, 2014 Widows convey their feelings and survival strategies in this compelling anthology. The Widows Handbook is the first anthology of poems by contemporary widows many of whom have written their way out of solitude and despair distilling their strongest feelings into poetry or memoir. This stirring collection celebrates the strategies widows learn and the resources they muster to deal with people living space possessions social life and especially themselves once shock has turned to the realization that nothing will ever be the same. As Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg says in her foreword losing one's partner is a loss like no other. The Widows Handbook is a collection of poetry from 87 American women of all ages legally married or not straight and gay whose partners or spouses have died. Some of the poets are already published widely including more than a dozen prizewinners four Pushcart nominees and two regional poets laureate. Others are not as well known and some appear in print for the first time here. With courage and wry humor these women encounter insidious depression poignant memories bureaucratic nonsense unfamiliar hardware well intentioned but thoughtless remarks demanding work spiritual revelation and unexpected lust navigating new relationships in the uncertain legacy of sexual liberation. They write frankly about being paralyzed and about going forward. Their poems are honest beautiful and accessible. Only poetry can speak such difficult truths and incite such intense empathy. While both men and women understand the bewilderment solitude and change of status thrust upon the widowed women suffer a particular social demotion and isolation. Anyone who has lost a loved one or is involved in helping the bereaved will be able to relate to the experiences conveyed in The Widows Handbook. The Widows' Handbook Lise Menn, Jacqueline Lapidus, 2014

How did I end up publishing my most personal thoughts in a book for the world to see? What made me decide to allow total strangers to peek into my heart and glimpse the raw pain and grief that overcame me following my husband's death? When I began this grief journal it was out of a survival instinct. I had always attempted to use journaling to sort through my thoughts in an attempt to gain insights into my feelings to elicit and capture whatever furtive thoughts lurked deep within my mind. For most of my adult life writing through painful emotional events soothed me. Composing poetry helped me extract and experience all the pain my logical brain kept me from feeling. After my husband's death writing was all I had. I met Rick Palmer when I was nearing forty. After a few years of unsuccessful relationships I was the single mother of one son and I had given up on ever finding the one. However Rick and I knew from the first meeting that it was meant to be and we enjoyed twenty-one wonderful years together. Rick was diagnosed with small cell lung cancer in October 2016. By our 21st wedding anniversary the next July he was in remission but was suffering from several side effects of the chemo and radiation therapy he had undergone He died unexpectedly after falling and breaking his hip on August 13 2017 Rick and I owned a web design company and a blog was the natural receptacle for my journal of feelings thoughts and memories It was also the perfect way to honor the man I loved beyond life and a place to dedicate my thoughts love poetry and prose to Rick However the blog was private only shared with my closet friends and family members After a few months I began to share a few of my posts and some of my poetry with other widows in the Hope for Widows Foundation private Facebook group Group members often responded to my writing by telling me that I put into words what they could not express I was invited to become a guest blogger for the Hope for Widows website At that point I made the decision to go public I chose a pen name the Writing Widow and publicized my website on Facebook Instagram and Twitter Since opening my blog to others I have been immensely rewarded with comments and thank yous from many other widows and those who have lost other loved ones as well Some suggested publishing my poetry which I did in I Wanted to Grow Old With You A Widow s First Year of Grief in Poetry This book A Widow s Words is a compilation of my most popular blog posts from the first year including the poetry from that book Grief is universal No two widows grieve in the same way but hopefully my musings will comfort others as they navigate the perilous and emotional journey of widowhood on their own
