Vladimir Soloviev Vladimir Soloviev:

Vladimir Soloviev Paul Marshall Allen, 2007-12 In 1795 Johann Wolfgang von Goethe produced his tale of tales The fairytale of The Green Snake and the Beautiful Lily an extraordinary masterwork that is unique among Goethe's works An initiatory fable of transformation the tale arose out of the Rosicrucian alchemical impulses that play an important role in Faust and Goethe's other writings Among those influenced by it was Rudolf Steiner whose mystery dramas employ similar themes The authors begin by placing the fairytale against the background of Goethe's life and cultural setting They then discuss its importance in the development of Steiner's spiritual science Finally they describe its visual language profound mystical insights and relevance for us today The book includes Carlyle's classic translation of the tale and illustrations plus Steiner's essay on its inner meaning The authors offer a positive look at the possibilities of the twenty first century They view Goethe's fairytale as fully relevant to our time just as it was when Goethe first wrote it Vladimir Soloviev, a Russian Newman (1853-1900) Michel d'Herbigny, 1918 Vladimir Soloviev and the Spiritualization of Matter Oliver Smith (Ph. D.), 2011 While he is widely acknowledged as the most important Russian thinker of the nineteenth century Vladimir Soloviev's place in the landscape of world philosophy nevertheless remains uncertain Approaching him through a single synoptic lens this book foregrounds his unique envisioning of the interaction between humanity and the material world By investigating the development of a single theme in his work his idea of the spiritualization of matter the task of humanity Smith constructs a rounded picture of Soloviev's overall importance to an understanding of nineteenth century thought as well as to modern theology and philosophy The picture that emerges is of a writer whose contribution to a Christian philosophy of matter resonates with many of the religious debates of modernity Vladimir Soloviev Mishel D'Herbigny, A. M. Buchanan, 2014-03-18 ONE of the fortunes of war has been the revelation to Western eyes of a Russian mystic It is Vladimir Soloviev He is not only the foremost spiritual philosopher of Russia but he is also one of the most distinguished types of the modern mind Towards the end of his life he happened to write a book against Tolstoi combating that writer's doctrine of the non resistance of evil The book has lately received two translations into English as a statement of the philosophy of war from the Russian point of view The subject of war however holds but a secondary place in the book and indeed a very secondary place in the life of Soloviev His great lifework was an exposition and propaganda of the claims of the Universal Church He was a convert from Orthodoxy to Catholicism and the one ruling passion of his life was to familiarize Russia with the idea of a Universal Church monarchical in its constitution This is the chief reason for calling him the Russian Newman There were other striking similarities between the two men although their divergencies were even more striking and more numerous Soloviev like Newman was very lonely in his soul He worked always from within the voice of conscience was his all impelling guide and force His method was the personal one He conceived in his own peculiar way a philosophy of the whole man which was neither intellectualist voluntarist nor sentimentalist With the watchword of integralism he stood for the due equipoise of all the faculties of man in the search for truth He worked out for himself a method remarkably analogous to Newman s doctrine of the Native Sense but with this important difference that he always preserved a profound respect for the use and the value of the syllogism Yet if on the one hand he was personal and subjective it was always with a sane appreciation of the value of Objective evidence Like Newman again he took a special delight in the study of Holy Scripture and the Fathers of Church history and the development of religion Like Newman too he had an ardent love for his own country He thought of Catholicism for Russia and believed that if only Russia were Catholic it would mean the religious transformation of the whole world Unlike Newman Soloviev never became a priest Both before and after his conversion he preferred to work as a layman Nevertheless he deemed that he could best follow his calling by remaining a celibate Once at the age of eighteen he did think of marriage but by the time he had arrived at the age of twenty he had fully resolved to lead a single life Vladimir Soloviev Paul M.
