Handbook of Satisfiability Armin Biere, 2009 Satisfiability SAT related topics have attracted researchers from various disciplines logic applied areas such as planning scheduling operations research and combinatorial optimization but also theoretical issues on the theme of complexity and much more they all are connected through SAT My personal interest in SAT stems from actual solving The increase in power of modern SAT solvers over the past 15 years has been phenomenal It has become the key enabling technology in automated verification of both computer hardware and software Bounded Model Checking BMC of computer hardware is now probably the most widely used model checking technique The counterexamples that it finds are just satisfying instances of a Boolean formula obtained by unwinding to some fixed depth a sequential circuit and its specification in linear temporal logic Extending model checking to software verification is a much more difficult problem on the frontier of current research One promising approach for languages like C with finite word length integers is to use the same idea as in BMC but with a decision procedure for the theory of bit vectors instead of SAT All decision procedures for bit vectors that I am familiar with ultimately make use of a fast SAT solver to handle complex formulas Decision procedures for more complicated theories like linear real and integer arithmetic are also used in program verification Most of them use powerful SAT solvers in an essential way Clearly efficient SAT solving is a key technology for 21st century computer science I expect this collection of papers on all theoretical and practical aspects of SAT solving will be extremely useful to both students and researchers and will lead to many further advances in the field Edmund Clarke FORE Systems University Professor of Computer Science and Professor of Electrical and Computer Engineering at Carnegie Mellon University winner of the 2007 A M Turing Award
